Mainly About Money
Here Abroad, Everywhere
France Is Learning
Shorter Week, Higher Prices

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

One hundred and fifty-three leading British economists mapping out a new plan to preserve peace, say:

"The importance of American cooperation in the work of peacemaking cannot be over-estimated."

It is to be hoped that the part that America will play in future European affairs, such as war financing, may be very amply overestimated.

If those gentlemen cannot abstain from cutting each other's throats without the assistance and money of the United States, why then let them cut each other's throats.

France is learning that the people always pay the piper, whoever the piper may be—a great conqueror loading them to war, or a lesser politician loading them with taxes.

In France, sugar has gone up in price, bread and meat have both gone up, two sous a kilogram for bread, two sous a pound for veal, and here government is held directly responsible by the housewife as regards the bread, for the French government fixes the price of bread as soon fixes the price of postage stamps.

Trailing behind England and the United States, that French, with less than twenty per cent of American unemployment, are discussing great public works to absorb the idle.

Billions are spoken of, but the "milliard," French word for "billion," means only one billion four sous pieces, the franc having been reduced by government fiat to that price. If a billion meant three twenty-five thousand francs, equivalent to the American billion, when the dollar was good, the French might well faint away, although they are fundamentally a rich people.

When Bismarck laid on France an indemnity equivalent to one billion dollars, after 1870, he thought he had asked for about all France could raise after a hard war. The French government offered Bismarck to pay Bismarck and the French people subscribed to the loan. Bismarck, then, should have had guessed sadly. France is far richer now than it was then.

French labor demands the forty-hour week and the government agrees to that. It demands wage increases of from twelve to seventeen per cent, and that makes the country a little thoughtful.

With a shorter week, diminished production, and higher wages, taxed sugar, veal, and meat, and bread, the cost of living is going up. Result: Trouble for the French worker, who really thinks, while he is at it, of making the profits as much in forty hours as he now does salaries in forty-eight or more, and of increased wages used to offset to the price of living and even the workers, who must pay, will groan.

How long will America continue pouring thousands of millions of dollars into gambling, lottery sweepstakes and other foreign enterprises?

It is interesting to read that in the banks of Dublin there are twenty million dollars in bills substituted from the so-called "hospitals sweepstakes." Hospitals did not get it—yet.

It might also enlighten the government to know that under the law no mention can be made of the sweepstakes gambling in England, which is why Englishmen wise to let their money be drained off in any kind of gambling enterprise, if it is not ENGLISH.

You cannot even send a telegram about sweepstakes over the English telegraph wires, to be published in countries outside of England. An telegraphing about the sweepstakes gambling games must go around England, her government-owned wire system will not handle it.

Under the Constitution, the United States government cannot forbid newspapers to print lottery news. But it does more gambling and heavier loads. But, the government might forbid transmission of that information through the post office. That would cut down the "grab."

P. Pauleen, of West Lynn, Mass., reminds us that the Norwegian government lottery system is which some win good prizes and nobody loses the original price of the ticket. It sounds reasonable.

Mr. Pauleen explains that the Norwegian government, instead of paying interest on its bonds, issues tickets, has drawings, pays large prizes, and yet, in due time, buys back all cancelled tickets at their face value, without interest. The government saves money because names drawn, while large, amount to less than the interest.

That would be the best kind of lottery here, if we must encourage gambling, although banks would not like it.

NATACHA RAMBOVA
Former Wife of Valentino

Palma, Mallorca, Aug. 24—Natacha Rambova, beautiful former wife of Rudolph Valentine, was forced to flee the scene of battle today when Loyalist troops landed in Mallorca and Rebels—some led by her present husband—turned out to fight them off.

Natacha, the former Winifred Hudnut, was the wife of Don Alfonso De Ulzaer, Spanish nobleman who is fighting on the side of insurgents in the Spanish civil war struggle for the Island of Mallorca. She is a Royalist.

INVADERS DRIVEN OFF

She was residing in her country estate in the village of Campos when 1500 Catalonians tried to force a landing near Puerto De Soller.

The ensuing encounter became a battlefield with farmers and peasants posing the trap and fighting with scythes and every variety of weapon.

When airplanes staged a dogfight overhead, Natacha herself, it would be worth headlines if she was on the opposite end of the island near Palma, and she boasted there.

Later, the Catalonians were forced back to their boats, leaving behind 500 and 600 dead and wounded, but they managed to get away.

LOST IN CAVES

Many of those who escaped death in the first battle became lost in labyrinthian caves which dot the region and are similar to stalagmite caves which Natacha owns near Palma.

Natacha and the don were married at Palma in August, 1934. Don Alfonso, who bears a striking resemblance to Valentino, is a member of one of the oldest Basque families.

His wife, following the death of Valentino, made a fortune in Mallorca real estate, buying up large villas and renting them to wealthy Americans. Later she and Don Alfonso purchased the huge villa overlooking the Mediterranean near Palma, to which she fled today.

J. H. MERRICK FOUND WITH WRISTS CUT

Once the power behind the throne at police headquarters, John H. Merrick, 53, former secretary to Police Commissioner Herbert A. Wilson, was rushed today to City Hospital with both wrists slashed.

At the hospital, where his name first was placed on the danger list, he rallied shortly before noon and physicians said he probably would recover.

According to Captain John McCarthy of the police homicide squad, the former police secretary admitted having slashed his wrists in a fit of despondency following a nervous breakdown.

He will be turned over, when discharged from the hospital, to his brother, Dr. Frank Merrick.

GARRETT ADVISER

Merrick, who was legal adviser to Commissioner Wilson during the heated part of prohibition enforcement in Boston, when Oliver Garrett was chief raiding officer, was virtually ousted when Eugene C. Hultman succeeded Wilson as police head.

Since then—1930—he has devoted himself to his private law practice. He has no office in Court street.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Aug. 24 (AP)—Five mine workers were missing, two more in a hospital, and three rescue workers were overcome today after a gas explosion in the Sullivan Trail mine at West Pittston.

Rescue crews were battling without success two hours after the blast, which collapsed a tunnel roof and walled up or buried the five men.

The explosion occurred in a vein 200 feet below the surface. Ten other men working in the same territory escaped.

BAR WARNED OF POLITICS IN COURTS

A judiciary unhampered by partisanship and partiality of politcis is the dominant issue among lawyers and citizens today in the opinion of William R. Ransom of New York, president of the American Bar Association, who today addressed 2000 members at a mass meeting in Symphony Hall.

Ransom also advocated reorganization of the association so that it will represent the opinion of all the lawyers in America, but laid stress on what he termed "the issue of a competent and truly independent judiciary."

He warned his listeners that their profession, collectively, was under criticism.

WARNS OF DANGER

Ransom stated:

"If the courts are to be recognized to serve given received theories, if judges are chosen to reward partisan or factional service and are to remain active in partisan or factional contests, and if judges on the bench are to bow weakly to supposed popular demands for breaking down rights of some citizens in order to favor other citizens, then constitutional safeguards become of no avail and the very keystone of the American form of government is in danger.

"We who are here are but a few of the members of our profession. Individually the American lawyer is well thought of, trusted fully, by clients and by all who know him.

"The most vital and sacred of human relations are given into his keeping without question and without security beyond his oath as a lawyer.

BAR INDEPENDENT

"Such a body of citizens, in all parts of the country, cannot be commanded, regimented, corrupted, coerced, silenced or made afraid; will not accept and follow blindly the politics or membership of any man or organization.

"American lawyers as a class form their own opinions, speak and act according to their own judgment, and cannot be controlled by clients or by government."

A resolution urging immediate war on lawyers who work with the underworld, and sponsoring protection of the poor in the courts of the country, was offered by a New York attorney.

Maurice C. Goldman of New York, author of the resolution, urged that investigations be launched on the work done by public defenders to consider methods of eliminating them from political control and to safeguard the rights of the State and individual.

In his resolution Attorney Goldman pointed out that many unfortunate persons, without benefit of counsel because of their lack of funds, are not dealt justice. He urged that lawyers see to it that these persons are protected

Berlin Bans Guns to Spain

BULLETINS

London, Aug. 24 (US) — The Daily Mail today quoted an Englishman, R. T. J. Hegarty, who had fled Barcelona, Spain, as declaring he had seen several monks beaten to death by a Red militia mob. Hegarty said:

"After surrender of the monks in a Barcelona hotel, Red militiamen with huge roadwork hammers smashed them on their heads, beating them to death."

Berlin, Aug. 24 (INS)—Joining Britain and France in a voluntary move to prevent Spain's civil war from spreading over Europe, Germany today announced an embargo on arms, ammunition and other war materials to Spain.

Germany's act formally brings the Reich into the French non-intervention scheme, to which other major European powers had already subscribed, and puts the whole non-intervention plan into effect.

It was hinted that any violations of what is now regarded as a united stand for non-intervention—such as French or Soviet assistance for the Madrid government—will call for international action to curb the violator.

Pamplona, Spain, Aug. 24—Spanish rebel officers reported today execution of five Frenchmen fighting for the loyalist government and warned that other French nationals who join in the civil war may expect the same fate.

Accusing France of aiding the Spanish Socialist regime, the Fascist officers asserted the five French volunteers were captured in a battle near Oyarzun and put to death.

Claims of victory and the charges against France alternated in a flood of communiques issuing from insurgent headquarters here.

LANDON INVADES NEW YORK IN HIS BATTLE FOR EAST

G. O. P. CHIEF SPEAKS AT 8 TONIGHT IN CHAUTAUQUA

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Aboard Landon Special Train, En Route to Chautauqua, N. Y., Aug. 24—Cheered by the warm, friendly reception given him over the week-end, in his birthplace, Gov. Alfred M. Landon moved through the industrial East today to carry his presidential campaign into western New York.

The Republican nominee will complete his first campaign trip with speeches tonight in Chautauqua, N. Y., and in Buffalo Wednesday night.

He will discuss public education and religious liberty at Chautauqua and federal finances at Buffalo.

One of the high spots in his day's itinerary will be a visit to Cattaraugville, Pa., where his ancestors are buried and where he attended school.

FOREBEARS' GRAVES

Claude P. Carey, heading a delegation from the town that boarded the train in New Castle where the governor spent the week-end, Governor Landon went with the family to the burial grounds, the home where his grandfather, Manuel Landon, was born, and the school he attended. The nominee will make a short address to the Landon clans of the country.

On leaving New Castle, Landon said:

"I had a grand time over the week-end. I was happy to have the opportunity to renew many old acquaintances and to revisit the scenes of my childhood.

"There's a warm spot in my heart for this section of Pennsylvania."

Landon revealed he had learned one new item of his family's history during this visit. It was that his maternal great grandfather, Robert Gillis Monsman, ran a boat on the Erie canal many years ago. He even learned his great grandfather once "threw a party" in New Castle with a group of other canal boat men.

"I'm sorry to leave here," he said, as his train moved out of New Castle. "My visit was so pleasant."

TO MEET ROOSEVELT

Early tomorrow Governor Landon will proceed to Buffalo to attend a luncheon and devote two days to conferences with Republican leaders from the Empire state. After his speech Wednesday night, he will return to Topeka, making a series of speeches en the week-end of his train trip in Illinois and Missouri Thursday.

On his return to Topeka, the nominee will plan his second campaign trip now scheduled for the mid-west and central northwest. It will follow his attendance on President Roosevelt's drouth relief conference at Des Moines, Ia., Sept. 1.

The Governor meanwhile received a flood of congratulatory telegrams on his first major speech at West Middlesex, Pa. Saturday. In it, he declared one of his first objectives in the White House would be the elimination of monopoly and special privileges.

He challenged President Roosevelt to fix out the presidential election on the issue of maintaining the time-honored American system of government and declared voters face a choice between the "pig in the poke policies" of the Roosevelt administration, and the American institutions under which "we have enjoyed more liberty and attained a higher standard of living than any other people in the world."

He spoke to at least 100,000 people at both places. This figure was disputed by local Democratic leaders until the Democratic-controlled police estimated the crowd at 75,000 and announced they had checked 22,282 automobiles parking grounds adjoining the country club where he spoke.

Landon somnee spent an active week-end visiting old friends and scenes of his childhood. He attended the Sabbath service at the church where his grandfather, the late Rev. William Monsman, preached. He also went to sleep in the very room of the parsonage in which he was born.

FINDS HIS RECORD

He inspected church records and found the notation of his own baptism on Christmas Day 1856, when he was two years old. He smilingly confessed he had no recollection of the event.

He also lunched with a group of women, who helped to shape his career. They were Mrs. Mary Reid "Aunty" Baird, his babyhood nurse, Mrs. Harry White, who cared for him in his early age at Wichita, Mrs. Dunham, who gave him chicken-pox as a boy, Mrs. Mary Jennings Hopkins, who made his baby clothes, Mrs. Emma Lindsay, who called him her favorite nephew." All are Governor will plan his second campaign trip.

"You're a Born Leader," Aged Nurse Tells Governor Landon

"I knew that you would some day be a great leader," 85-year-old Mrs. Mary Baird, "Auntie," tells Republican Presidential Candidate Alfred M. Landon, after church services in Landon's "home town," West Middlesex, Pa. The aged woman recalled scenes of Landon's early childhood when she played the role of nurse for baby Landon. The Kansas governor is "just a big grown-up boy" with a lot of good old-fashioned common sense, according to Mrs. Baird.

VET OFFICIALS, LABOR GROUPS BACK WHITE

By JOHN T. LAMBERT

Augusta, Me., Aug. 24—Because of his strong record in support of national defense and the war veterans, Senator Wallace H. White, Jr., has been enthusiastically endorsed in his campaign for re-election by outstanding officials of the American Legion, it was revealed.

At least six pro[illegible]nt labor organizations have also commended his "fair, impartial and considerate" attitude on legislation affecting the welfare of the working people, it was also [illegible]ade [illegible]vn today.

These declarations have put a definite crimp into the campaign of Governor Louis J. Brann, who had assumed that the working people would aspirely follow some of the radical chieftains who have flocked to the New Deal.

LOWE STATEMENT

The at[illegible]ude of the American Legion on Senator White was sought by Lieutenant-Colonel Frank E. Lowe, former national president of the Reserve Officers' Association of the Unite. States, who declared:

"I have always found Senator White to be a strong supporter of the national defense on land, on sea, and in the air."

In response to Colonel Lowe's inquiry, Colonel John Thomas Taylor, Jr., director of the national legislative committee of the American Legion replied:

"I have known the Senator during his long term of service in the Senate.

"He has been a hard worker and has taken a deep interest in all legislation dealing with our national defense and in any way affecting veterans.

'UNDERSTANDS PROBLEMS'

"I have always felt free to consult him upon any matters of this character, having enjoyed not only his confidence but the benefit of his advice.

"He has a clear understanding of these problems and is one who can be reliably depended upon.

"I appreciate the advice and assistance he has given me upon many occasions."

In his letter Colonel Taylor mentioned that during the bitter battle in Congress to restore veterans the benefits which had been taken away from them by the Roosevelt New Deal, Senator White worked untiringly for the veterans and voted to pass their measure over the presidential veto.

Senator White, according to Colonel Taylor, "did everything possible" to secure the passage of the pay-now bonus legislation against the spectacular and acrimonious veto of it by Roosevelt.

LETTERS MADE PUBLIC

Letters commending Senator White's fair and reasonable attitude towards legislation sought in behalf of the working people were made public from:

Brotherhood of Maintenance on Way Employes, Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Brotherhood of Boilermakers, Iron Ship Builders and Helpers, Brotherhood of Railway Signal Men of America, American Train Dispatcher's Association and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engine Men.

These letters were made public reluctantly by Senator White after his friends convinced him that he owed it to himself to show to the working people of Maine how his record is regarded by the leaders at Washington who have the responsibility of securing legislation beneficial to the workers.

EXTRAORDINARY RECORD

White's friends know that he has an extraordinary record at Washington of things accomplished for advantage of Maine, but they find him modestly unwilling to "toot his own horn."

The working people in the textile cities of Maine are said to be slowly but surely turning away from the New Deal candidate.

These people have come to regard the New Deal as utterly incompetent. They have seen their own labor imperilled by the enormous influx of textile goods from Japan and other "slave-wage" countries.

Eaton Hails Colby Swing to Landon

Jamestown, N. Y., Aug. 24 (INS)—Many noted Democrats will follow Bainbridge Colby in his support of Governor Alfred M. Landon, Republican State Chairman Melvin C. Eaton declared today on his return here from Erie, Pa., to meet the Republican nominee.

Commenting on the former secretary of state's declaration for Governor Landon, Eaton said:

"Here again is an outstanding Democrat who finds himself unable to follow the false philosophies and the wierd administration of the New Deal. Many noted Democrats have preceded Mr. Colby to the Landon cause and many will follow him.

"This support of Governor Landon will unquestionably attract many thousands of additional old line Democrats and men, who have served the nation and their party, to the present crusade to restore American government to the people and bring to an end the New Deal's Marxian socialistic scheme of administration."

PENSION PARTY PAPERS SENT TO BISHOP

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

Asserting that "this flouting of the law should not be permitted to go unchallenged," Secretary of State Frederic W. Cook today turned over to District Attorney Warren L. Bishop of Middlesex County the entire set of state-wide papers filed on behalf of Townsend candidates, which were later withdrawn after their repudiation by Townsend officials.

At the same time, Democratic jubilation over alleged charges by Secretary Cook that papers of Independent candidates in general contained fraudulent signatures, were chagrined when Cook declared today in emphatic terms that his reference to "forged signatures" was confined solely to the Townsend papers, all of which had been withdrawn.

"To clear up any misunderstanding of remarks made by me at the meeting in Swansea yesterday regarding the matter of forged signatures on nomination papers," Secretary Cook said, "my statements only applied to nomination papers in behalf of alleged candidates for state-wide office under the Townsend movement and the candidacies and signatures of signers were repudiated by them. My remarks had absolutely no connection with papers of any other independent candidates for any other office.

"A number of other nomination papers in dispute are now being heard by the ballot law commission. This commission sits as a court and under no circumstances would I or should I make any statement which would prejudice this State Ballot Law Commission."

"I have no personal knowledge of the signatures on the papers of Greenwood, O'Brien or any of the others whose cases are now before this commission. I do know from careful investigation that hundreds of signatures on the Townsend papers are not those of the persons whose names appear thereon.

URGES LEGISLATION

"The matter of forging signatures is a serious one and some action should be taken to prevent the carrying on of such practices in Massachusetts. This flouting of the law should not be permitted to go unchallenged.

"No definite action would be taken on the matters now before the Ballot Law commission unless it should appear that irregularities or forgeries were proven before that commission. That is a matter to rthe commission itself to determine.

"I am, however, in receipt this morning of a communication signed by some 50 leaders of the Townsend movement in Middlesex county requesting me to turn over to the proper authorities any information in my possession relative to the filing of nomination papers bearing as a political principle Townsend Plan or Townsend Pension plan for the purpose of ascertaining the authenticity of the signatures thereon.

"In compliance with the request I deem it my duty to forward to the district attorney of Middlesex county this information for whatever action he may deem warranted. I wish to emphasize again that my remarks of yesterday apply only to matters that are not now before the Ballot Law Commission."

The Greenwood referred to by Secretary Cook is Mayor Robert Greenwood of Fitchburg, and the O'Brien mentioned is former District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien. Both are independent candidates for the governorship, in opposition to Governor Curley's candidacy. O'Brien is also the nominee for vice-president on the Union party ticket.

PAPERS CHALLENGED

These independent papers and others are being challenged before the ballot law commission by Joseph McGrath, chairman of the Democratic state committee. Charges have been flying thick and fast in political circles that the Townsend state ticket signatures were manipulated by interests friendly to the Democratic cause.

The alleged attack by Secretary Cook on nomination paper signatures, coming from such an unimpeachable source, appeared to back up the protest on independent papers filed by Chairman McGrath, and the Democratic leaders made the most of it.

The position of Cook, as stated by him today, painted an entirely different picture.

As one prominent candidate for office commented today, the Democrats "have been hoisted on their own petard."

Roosevelt in Capital, Tackles State Problems

By GEORGE DURNO

Washington, Aug. 24 (INS)—President Roosevelt and his party arrived at Union Station at 8:30 a. m. (EST) today from Hyde Park, N. Y., and the President went direct to the White House.

The major problems of state occupied President Roosevelt's immediate attention.

Eradication of tax injustices to business, the increasingly threatening situation in Europe and drouth relief were his primary concern.

Aboard the special train which brought the President back from Hyde Park were Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, acting Budget Director Daniel Bell, special Treasury Assistant Herbert C. Gaston and George C. Haas, tax expert.

The presence of Haas indicated they had been conferring with the President on the administration's promise there would be no increase in taxation asked in the next Congress, and also the further promise that steps would be taken to iron inequities and injustices out of the present set of schedules.

One of the President's first callers this morning was to be Undersecretary of State William Phillips, who was expected to come to the White House armed with latest information on the Spanish revolution, particularly insofar as it threatens to embroil Europe in another general war.

Later in the day, Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace, Governor William I. Myer of the Farm Credit Administration, and Dr. W. W. Alexander, of the re-settlement administration, were due to report on developments in the drouth area, toward which the President will head tomorrow night.

Before leaving Hyde Park the executive had delivered another strong indictment of warlike tendencies among the nations of Europe. Following closely on his address at Chautauqua, N. Y., in which he outlined the administration's foreign policy, Mr. Roosevelt told a delegation from the People's Mandate Against War that:

1—Outside of the Americas, governments generally are increasing the desire of 35 per cent of their populations for peace;

2—Certain nations are "putting the cart ahead of the horse" by using the need of improved economic conditions as an excuse for going to war, whereas bettered economic conditions so much more easily could be obtained by freer trade and internal development.

Tomorrow night Mr. Roosevelt will swing west into the dust bowl to learn at first hand how his relief program is progressing, and to meet, among others, with his Republican presidential rival, Gov. Alfred M. Landon.

New York, Aug. 24 (INS)—Two prominent New York Democrats today announced they would actively campaign for the election of Gov. Alfred M. Landon, Republican candidate for the presidency.

Dr. William Browning, nationally known neurologist, a life-long Democrat, said he would wage a campaign among medical men for Governor Landon's election. Miss Sarah Conley, who served from 1920 to 1934 as a member of the Democratic county committee, has accepted appointment to the women's staff of the Republican national committee and will serve as an adviser to independent voters.

"Gov. Landon typifies the real American," Dr. Browning declared in explaining his change of political faith. "He will know who is getting all this money the New Deal spenders are wasting. He will see that no relief money is used to build up political fences."

Miss Conley, a native of Georgia, who has taught in women's colleges in Alabama, explained her change of heart thusly:

"I am an American before I am a member of any political party and I think the time has come to clean house at Washington."

Toronto Stork Marathon Prize Now Reaches $1,000,000

Contestants in Canada's Famous Baby Derby

CLIMAX NEARS IN 10-YEAR RACE

7 MOTHERS VIE FOR AWARD

By FRED MENAGH
(King Features Syndicate Staff Writer)
Copyright 1936 King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Toronto, Canada, Aug. 24—This city's amazing "Stork Derby"—featuring seven of Toronto's most prolific mothers vieing for first honors in a ten-year non-birth-control race will reach a breath-taking climax on October 31 of this year, and interest in the bizarre contest has soared to a new high.

Reports from apparently reliable sources now indicate the amount of money being competed for will be nearer $1,000,000 than the originally estimated $500,000.

Executors of the estate of the late Charles Vance Millar, wealthy Toronto bachelor, lawyer and sportsman who devised the epoch-making maternity Marathon, in his will, remain close-mouthed.

But credence is lent to reports of an increase in the value of the estate on at least one score. Manufacturers' representatives who are in Toronto to procure the endorsement of their products by various of the contestants in their competitive feats, now confidently place the amount of the baby sweepstakes prize at $1,000,000.

Fantastic Bequest

But if the fantastic Millar bequest has assumed greater proportions than anticipated, it is as nothing compared to the increase in Toronto's population—in certain quarters of the city during the past decade. To date the seven competing mothers have borne a total of some 104 children, 86 of whom are alive today, and 68 of whom are eligible for the contest—that is, were born since October 31, 1926.

The energetic contestants still left in the race—three or four had to drop out during the past year—are:

MRS. GRACE BAGNATO, 45—Married at the tender age of 15, Mrs. Bagnato, one of Toronto's foremost court interpreters, expects her 24th baby any day now. Eighteen of her children are alive and well today, and she takes great pride in the fact that she can boast five grandchildren. The child she is expecting will be her tenth in the ten years since the "Stork Derby" began. Her husband, Joseph, is a Customs House employe.

MRS. KATHLEEN NAGLE, 33—Eleven of her 12 children are alive today. She is the mother of one set of twins, and ten of her eleven living youngsters are eligible in the maternity marathon, including the latest arrival born on August 12. Her husband, John, a carpenter and mechanic by trade, is now on relief.

Hubby on Relief

MRS. EMANUELLA DARRIGO, 45—Fifteen of her 16 children, including two sets of twins, are alive and healthy. She already has ten children eligible in the baby marathon. Next arrival of the stork, however, is not scheduled until several months after closing date. Her husband, Steffano, is a fruit store proprietor.

MRS. HILDA GRAZIANO—Of her total of 10 eligible children, 9 survive, including little Benito Mussolini, born on August 16. Although she had said a short time ago that X-rays assured her she would bear twins, only one baby arrived. Gus Graziano, her husband is a greenhouse worker, now on relief.

MRS. ALICE TIMLECK, 37—All except three of her 17 children are alive and healthy. She has ten that are eligible, and is not expecting another. Her chances of winning or sharing the prize are excellent. For a time the Toronto Birth Control Clinic, oddly enough, sponsored Mrs. Timleck's chances of carrying off the pot of gold at the end of the Maternity Marathon rainbow. She had agreed to campaign for birth control when she won. Her husband, Arthur H. Timleck, is an expert marine mechanic, steadily employed.

MRS. MADELINE HARRISON, 38—Considered the most attractive and youthful appearing of all the contestants, Mrs. Harrison in 19 years of marriage has borne 11 fine-looking children, all of whom are living. She has two sets of twins, but only 8 of her youngsters were born in the 10-year period. While she is expecting another, it is not scheduled for arrival until long after the closing date. Her husband, Ambrose, is a Toronto street car motorman, steadily employed.

Ironic Humor

MRS. LILLIAN KENNY, 32—A vivacious, talkative, artistically talented French-Canadian, Mrs. Kenny claims to have given birth to a total of 13 children during her married life, among them three sets of twins. Only 8 are living today, but she claims that 11 of the total number were born within the decade. Furthermore she predicts that she is going to have another set of twins, "or maybe quintuplets," before October 31. She and her middle aged husband, Matthew, have been on relief for years. If Mrs. Kenny is able to substantiate her contentions, which many persons doubt, she seems certain to be the sweepstakes winner.

These are the women living in widely different parts of Toronto, who for years past have been ahead of one another. Had it not been for the pandemic Millar and his astounding will, the seven who, when he was embarrassed conservative residents of this city to end, they might well have been ignorant of one another's existence.

And, too, it is quite possible they might not now have so many children as their families, although each of the mothers declares emphatically she would have had just as many children in the last ten years, even if there had been no glittering pot of gold at the end of the Maternity Marathon rainbow.

In fact, a few years ago embarrassed and disgruntled Toronto conservatives shocked by the soaring alimony suddenly created by the Millar will, made every effort to have power granted them that pot of gold as mythical as the one at the end of the proverbial rainbow. They were worst so far as to introduce a bill in Parliament declaring the will to be "against public policy," and seeking to have the estate turned over to the Province of Ontario.

Such an unprecedented storm of public protest followed, however, that Premier W. H. Price, then attorney general, who had authored the bill, finally withdrew it. Still there are many sceptics in Toronto who express the opinion that in the final analysis the Millar will may turn out to be but a grim joke.

One similar to many that the astute lawyer-millionaire practiced before he succumbed to a heart attack induced by acute indigestion at the age of 75.

The will was made by Millar more than five years before his death, which occurred on October 21, 1926. It is to be stated, "This will is necessarily uncommon and capricious, because I have no dependents or near relations and no duty rests upon me to leave any property at my death, and what I do leave is proof of my folly in gathering and retaining more than I required in my lifetime."

Legal Battle Seen

Then, after bequeathing to clergymen charity in his widely known and highly prosperous brewing business, and also race track stock, Millar rounded his fantastic document out with the following paragraph:

"I give, devise and bequeath unto my executors and trustees named below in trust to convert into money as they deem advisable and invest all the money until the expiration of nine years from my death, and then call in and convert it all into money, and at the expiration of ten years from my death to give it and its accumulations to the mother who has since my death given birth in Toronto to the greatest number of children as shown by the registrations under the Vital Statistics Act. If one or more mothers have equal highest number of registrations under the said act, to divide the said money and accumulations equally between them."

Actually it was a number of years before liquidation of the Millar estate began last October that its ultimate cash value was estimated at a half million.

A startling note in the entire contest has been given by Mr. Joseph Sedgewick, solicitor to the attorney-general. During the course of a specially arranged interview in his Parliament Building offices he declared:

"I am fairly convinced that the winning Millar will contestants are going to get that money—some day. Of course there is going to be all kinds of litigation. But so far as the government is concerned its role now is merely that of benevolent spectator."

At least four of the competing mothers are already represented by lawyers in preparation for the expected court battle. As soon as the Maternity Marathon ten-year period ends those who feel they are the winners will present their claims to the executors. The executors in turn will present the claims to the court, who will instruct them as to disposition of the vast fund.

Meanwhile the whirring of the wings of storks grows ever closer over Toronto. The million dollar babies are on their way.

Don't miss the "Stork Derby" installment that will appear tomorrow in this newspaper.

Records Severe Quake

Washington, Aug. 24 (AP)—Georgetown University today reported recording a severe earthquake yesterday. It began at 2:31:33 p. m. (E.D.T.) and ended at 9 p. m. The distance was estimated at 9300 miles, probably in the southeast Pacific.

Until the stork arrived on August 16, bringing her only one baby — a boy to be named Benito Mussolini — Mrs. Hilda Graziano had maintained that she would have twins; said an X-ray plate had shown this to be the case. Now she is one of four mothers each claiming ten eligible for the prize.

Mrs. Arthur Hollis Timleck, shown holding baby Gerald, has just ten eligibles for that $1,000,000 baby sweepstakes. That's all there are—and she says there won't be any more, ever, for she is now a disciple of birth control. But at that, she may be one of five mothers tied with ten each, the five to share the stake equally.

On August 12, eighty days before the deadline date, Mrs. Kathleen Nagle, shown with her husband, John, gave birth to a baby in Toronto. This makes her score ten eligible children. If Mrs. Kenny fails to sustain her claim of eleven, Mrs. Nagle will at least share in the Millar $1,000,000. But there are those "ifs".

GIRLS SEE HUNT FOR SHIP SUICIDE

Thrilling stories of how three ships, buffeted by heavy seas and a thunder storm, hove to in response to the call of "man overboard," were told today by passengers on the Eastern steamship liner New York.

The New York, two hours behind schedule, played the stellar role in a fruitless search for the "mysterious man" alleged to have hurled himself from the top deck of the New York at 9:24 p. m. last night.

Running a heavy sea, the New York was off New Haven when Mr. and Mrs. James F. Reilly of Binghamton, N. Y., reported that the body of a man swept downward, thudded against the rail of the deck on which they were standing, and disappeared.

CREW ATTRACTED

The screams of Mrs. Reilly attracted members of the crew and Captain Roland Litchfield, who ordered full speed astern. Despite the high sea and blinding squalls of rain, Litchfield sent a lifeboat to the rescue. High-powered searchlights swept the water. Illuminated buoys were launched.

Meanwhile the Fall River liner Commonwealth and the Eastern freighter Falmouth came out of the murk. Both ships ran the risk of lowering boats which joined in the search.

Tossed about like chips in the raging waters, the searching boats cruised about for more than an hour while passengers on the New York and Commonwealth braved the storm to watch the maneuvers.

WATCHES RESCUE

Virginia Weddleton, of 401 Quincy street, Dorchester, and Virginia Godfrey, of 55 Bartlett street, Roxbury, were among the first to reach deck when the alarm was sounded.

"It was one of the most thrilling things I've seen in my life," said Miss Weddleton. "A look at that frothing water and you'd never think men would dare to go out on it."

Check of the passenger list showed no one missing. Harry Brooks, general passenger agent for the Eastern Steamship Company, expressed the belief that the man boarded the ship as a visitor at New York.

Salt in Diet Balks Heat?

Salt in the diet as a preventive of heat exhaustion was emphasized today by a group of Harvard professors. At the opening of a six-day symposium at Harvard Medical school on "The Atmospheric Environment and Its Effect on Man."

After salt had been added to drinking water the number of heat prostrations in a group of steel mills was sharply reduced.

Court Fails to Act On Luciano Plea

Plattsburgh, N. Y., Aug. 24 (INS)—County Judge Thomas F. Cronke today reserved decision on the application of Charles "Lucky" Luciano, former New York City vice overlord, to be freed from prison on the ground he was convicted illegally.

Mayor Mansfield today awarded a contract to the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation of East Boston for repairs to the ferryboat Lieutenant Lawrence Flaherty at a cost of $11,250.

Million Suit Against Mary Pickford to Open Wednesday

The $1,000,000 mystery suit brought against Mary Pickford in 1934 by J. Raymond Cornell, of Quincy and Wellesley, will be opened Wednesday at the Federal building, it was announced today.

Scores of witnesses have been summoned for the hearing before Francis E. Burns, New York attorney appointed by Judge John C. Knox, of New York, to hear the testimony.

Cornell's suit was filed through attorneys after he had met with the actress in a downtown hotel and left their meeting hurriedly.

Cornell steadfastly refuses to divulge the cause of his action which came after the actress announced she had received kidnap threats.

At the time of his meeting with Miss Pickford, Cornell said he had brought to the hotel suite a document written by Mary Baker Eddy, founder of Christian Science, in which the actress was interested.

Cornell related that he and Hylda Moody, a metaphysician, found the actress distraught and upset and left without preaching her with the document as they thought the time not proper for presentation.

Later Cornell charged that the actress' allegations through the press that he had attempted to kidnap her and extort money were outrageous.

GERMANY JOINS EMBARGO; 5 FRENCH REDS SHOT

insisted that a fleet of 15 French planes bombed Navalperal and that other war craft crossed the Pyrenees on the northern border and bombed Oyarzun and Toloso.

The ships then returned to France, the rebels asserted.

FRENCH INVASION CLAIMED

The Loyalist force invading the island of Mallorca in the Mediterranean, it was charged here, was composed largely of French and Russian volunteers and the militia was using French munitions.

Insurgents asserted that the invasion of Mallorca had been beaten back with 300 killed. One hundred prisoners were taken in a battle at Cordoba, the Fascists said.

Officers said that animosity toward Franco was increased by discovery in a French submarine at the Burgos loaded with dynamite. The rebels said they suspected a scheme to blow up their headquarters there.

The statement on the Mallorca fighting, issued in broken English, follows:

"During the intended landings of Red army in Mallorca, where in they suffered losses, it proved with extraordinary surprise that the Marxist columns were formed in great part by subjects belonging to the French and Russian nations.

"With even greater stupefaction it was observed that between war materials captured an important quantity comes from the French works at Saint Etienne, France.

REBELS CLAIM VICTORIES

"It is unnecessary to remark on the extraordinary gravity of this fact as it regards a group of isles whereon only the Spanish flag is the warrant of European peace and Mediterranean balance."

Insurgent victories were claimed at Guadalajara in Rioja Province and at Navalmoral and Trubia with "numerous deaths, many captured and munitions seized."

The insurgent Fascist command at Valladolid asserted a fleet of 21 rebel airplanes had bombed the Jetafe and Cuatro Vientos airports at Madrid yesterday. The statement said the attackers met no resistance.

The Havas (French) News Agency reported Madrid denied the airports at the capital had been bombed, but a Portuguese newspaper reported rebel planes destroyed hangars and many government ships in attack on the airdrome at Madrid."

Britain Orders Naval Guns To Guard Ships in Spain

London, Aug. 24 (INS)—Determined to enforce respect for British naval supremacy in the Mediterranean, the Admiralty today speedily followed the search of an English ship by a Spanish cruiser with instructions to all British warships in the vicinity to challenge any Spanish craft interfering with British shipping on the high seas.

Britain's new resolution was demonstrated with still greater speed Sunday when three warships, with orders to destroy if necessary, were rushed to the aid of the cargo boat Gibel Zerjon, hailed by the loyalist Spanish cruiser Miguel de Cervantes.

Officers of the Miguel de Cervantes apologized and withdrew their attempt to divert the Gibel Zerjon, with its cargo of gasoline, from the rebel African port of Melilla to loyalist Malaga, and today the ship was understood to be discharging her cargo at Melilla.

NAVY STANDING BY

Pointing a formal protest to Madrid, however, and ordering all naval stations in the western Mediterranean to stand by for any emergencies, Britain drew the sword the incident as closed, following a similar occurrence in the German ship Hannover, and the gravity of the international situation has been greatly increased, Britain declared on Sunday night. It was learned at the Admiralty, will be cleared for action, and any Spanish warship dangerously British shipping will be forced to withdraw under penalty of being immediately fired upon.

The belief is growing in British quarters that the Madrid government is still able to control the crews of her warships, and may force its pennies to London, for only last week a group of Spanish warships would not attempt to search British merchant vessels on the high seas.

MURDER OWN OFFICERS

Crews of some of the Spanish ships are reported to have imprisoned or murdered their officers. It was a chief petty officer who, as "commander" talked with the mast-head of the Gibel Zerjon.

(Editor's Note: On Aug. 18 Lee Dickson, International News Service correspondent aboard the U. S. S. Oklahoma, visited the Miguel de Cervantes in Malaga Harbor, and the "Cervantes, commanded by eight" commanding the cruiser described to him how they murdered their officers. They tried to take over the ship for the rebels, the committeemen told Dickson, but we had to choose but to kill them.)

Britain was also angered by a report that the Gibel Zerjon, which was escorted by a Spanish Secret agents of Madrid at Gibraltar, according to Reuter's agency, broke off the Miguel de Cervantes at Malaga that the British ship was leaving for Melilla with supplies, including fuel, and the Spanish cruiser thereupon hastened to the vicinity of Melilla and lay in wait.

German Accord Cheers France; War Act Denied

Paris, Aug. 24 (AP)—Germany's agreement to embargo arms and airplanes to Spain was hailed by the French foreign office today as signalling virtual completion of an international neutrality accord.

At the same time, French officials disclaimed any governmental part in the reported Spanish service of French volunteers, five of whom were reported executed by Spain's Fascist Rebels.

A spokesman said such volunteers "had gone of their own free will" and declared the government had been unable to prevent Leftist "adventurers" from enlisting under the Socialist Madrid banner.

Foreign office officials interpreted Joachim Ribbentrop, Germany's notification of the German embargo to the French Ambassador, Francois-Poncet, as constituting even more than acceptance of French proposals for non-intervention in Spain.

They considered it in the light of prompt action to put neutrality measures actually into effect.

Italy last week was the first to accept the neutrality proposals, with reservations.

Germany's Approval Buoys British Hope

London, Aug. 24 (AP)—A German decision to embargo arms shipments to Spain cheered the British today.

At the same time, informed sources said his Majesty's government was disposed to regard the incident of Spanish warship interference with a British freighter in the Straits of Gibraltar as "closed," in view of an apology from the commander of the Madrid government cruiser which stopped the ship.

Germany's action, although not a matter of official record here as yet, was considered encouraging news in informed quarters.

Moors Reported in Revolt Against Rebels

Paris, Aug. 24 (AP)—Tangier dispatches to L'Oeuvre, Leftist Paris newspaper, today reported Moorish Nationalists were revolting against rebel authorities in Spanish Morocco.

The Nationalists, the dispatches said, were angered by rebel use of native troops against the Spanish government.

All Faiths Flay Slaughter Of Clerics; Warn U. S.

New York, Aug. 24 (UP)—Catholic, Jewish and Protestant clergymen today joined in deploring the massacre of prelates, priests and nuns and the wanton destruction of churches and shrines by Communists in Spain. Some of them sounded the note that the war between Communism and Christianity was going on in the United States as well and Spain, although it had not reached the same intensity. Here were some of the expressions of opinion:

BISHOP JAMES DE WOLFE PERRY, head of the Episcopal church in America, interviewed at Newport, R. I.—Destruction of churches and places of worship by Loyalists in the Spanish fighting is a form of persecution so obvious that it speaks for itself. The recent Associated Press pictures from Spain showing a Red militiaman spraying a statue of Christ in a public square murder mocked every religious more graphic than any words.

RED TO MEXICO

VERY REV. MGR. JOHN J. OTTEL, Our Lady of the Miraculous Medal Church, Ridgewood, L. I.—The situation in Spain is a confirmation of that in Mexico and directly similar to what happened some years ago in Russia. When Communism gets a grip the church suffers. We must be forewarned here by what we see in other countries and do all we can to prevent such conditions coming into being in the United States.

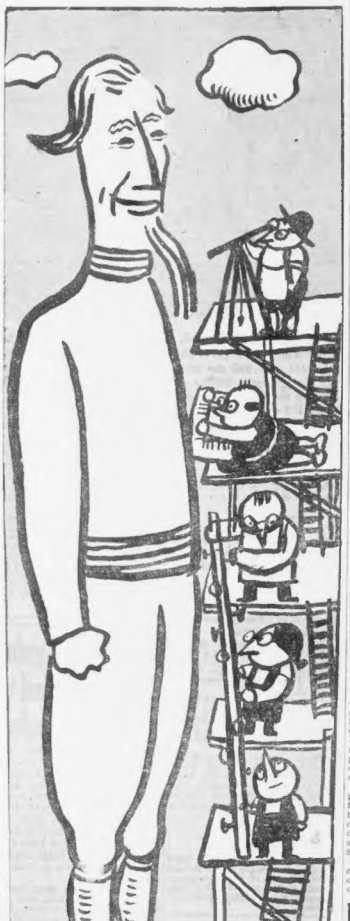
VERY REV. JOHN J. CLARKE, St. Michael's Church, Flushing, N. Y.—The real civil war in Spain is between Christianity and Communism. The same civil war is being fought in the United States, although it has not reached the same proportions as it has in some other countries. We must continue in addition to Catholic, Christian activities. We must not let any outside influences in business or in our social relations swerve us toward Communism.

DENOUNCED BY RABBI

REV. ABRAHAM L. FEINBERG, Rabbi of Mount Neboh congregation — Spanish Communists are exulting their spleen on their political opponents by destroying shrines and churches and killing bishops, priests and nuns are ensaged in a form of barbarism that invites the censure of the civilized world. In contrast to them the moral indignation voiced by the Lutheran clergymen in Germany against dictatorship in the domain of religion stands out in stimulating contrast. It is this kind of spiritual courage that is needed—not the revival of the — and atrocities of the Gobs. The barbarity in Spain will ultimately defeat itself and its leaders.

REV. LAWRENCE D. ITAGAN, Provincial of the order of the Carmelite, speaking at masses in the church of St. Simon Stock, Bronx, N. Y.—Not only are our bishops, priests and nuns being shot down and tortured in Spain, but even civilians are being sacrificed for no other reason than they have persisted in clinging to their faith. I ask your prayers that God may give strength and courage to all members of the church to persist in that faith even in the face of the outrages now directing the attention of the civilized world of Spain.

GULLIBLE'S TRAVAILS



By Uncle Samuel Gullible

AS the King of LAPUTA and I drew near his courtiers the terrifying roar continued.. The King quickly stuffed some cotton in his ears.

"Who is that making that awful roar?" I asked.

"That is Harry Hopkins," replied the King. "He is yelling for more money to spend. He always does it. Boys," he said, turning to his courtiers, "this is Uncle Samuel Gullible. He has just been wrecked on our island. He is in terrible shape. We must get him a new suit of clothes."

With these words the royal tailors approached, to measure me for a new suit. They carried telescopes, quadrants, and surveying levels. With these various instruments they began measuring me, from a considerable distance.

"Have you no tape-measures in the Land of Appalling Piffle United To Asininity?" I asked.

"Tut! tut!" replied the King. "Tape-measures are definitely out. You must be a hopeless reactionary, Uncle Gullible. We measure for a suit astronomically, mathematically and scientifically."

"I think I would prefer to keep my regular clothes," I said hastily.

"Nonsense," replied the King. "Boys, have you obtained all the necessary astronomical calculations and scientific data? Then hasten away, and make Uncle Samuel a new suit."

Making a final correction of my left sleeve by taking a squint at the sun, the court tailors hastily departed.

I had just turned to thank the King for his kindness, when suddenly there was the most appalling——

600 DEAD DAY'S TOLL OF SPAIN CIVIL WAR

Madrid, Aug. 24 (INS)—More than 600 slain were added today to Spain's civil war toll as the tide of battle swung back and forth on the bleeding nation's many battle fronts.

In the great conflict of the far Southern sector, Rebels killed 400 Loyalists in a successful defense of Antequera, near Malaga, according to Insurgents' claims.

Two loyalist columns engaged in bitter hand-to-hand fighting at besieged Cordova, after the city was bombarded by Loyalist artillery, and the Rebels suffered heavy losses in killed and wounded.

A government column, under Capt. Albinareta arrived at Loma, near Cordova, and predicted the city would soon fall. Many Rebels in Cordova have gone over to the Loyalists, it was claimed here.

LOYALISTS CLAIM VICTORIES

Government victories were reported in a series of engagements on the Saragossa-Huesca front in the northeast. With 150 rebel casualties, 34 government troops were killed or wounded, Loyalists have taken the "Hill of the Wolf" dominating rebel Sarragossa, it was stated here.

Leftist militiamen occupied Belchite, also near Saragossa, another Loyalist force is drawing near to Teruel, and rebel attacks at Almudevar and Viyuela, south of Huesca, were repulsed, according to the government.

REBELS BEAT OFF MINERS

Barcelona reported that the enemy barricades were hit when Loyalist artillery bombarded Huesca, while government columns entered La Granja, Hermitage, Salas, San Julien and Debanzo, all near Huesca.

Directly conflicting claims came from Oviedo, long besieged by thousands of Asturian miners. An attempt by the miners to take the city from the rebels was beaten off, the insurgents said, while Madrid asserted that an attack on the miners from without, in an effort to lift the siege, failed.

Rebels From Air and Sea Hurl Fire Against Irun

Hendaye, France, Aug. 24 (INS)—Bombardments by government and rebel airplanes and warships today raked the coast of the Bay of Biscay, with 50 persons reported killed in loyalist Irun, and the rebel city of Oviedo in imminent peril of capture by the thousands of Asturian miners who have besieged it for a month.

Three rebel airplanes participated in the raid on Irun, where for more than a week a struggle has been going on for possession of the town. Nine bombs thundered into the heart of the town, and others blasted near the fort of St. Marcial.

Official confirmation was received today of the killing of Colonel Ortez Adezarria, commander of the rebels at Orazun.

Uzcudun Hikes Back From Death At Reds' Hands

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press

Pamplona, Spain, Aug. 24— Paulino Uzcudun, Basque heavyweight fighter, trudged 50 miles through the woods and over mountains to "return from the dead" today.

"Communists wanted to kill me," the Fascist sympathizer said, "because I wore a Clean shirt and smoked good cigars."

The woodchopper denounced as "Communist propaganda" reports of his death given out by the People's Front forces at San Sebastian.

He said "funny looking people with guns" had been following him about for several weeks.

"One night I had enough," he continued. "I lute the man with five Communist riflemen tracking me. It took me four days without food and sleep to reach Pamplona."

Paolino said he would accompany rebel troops in the advance on San Sebastian in an effort to see his aged mother who lives in a small town occupied by Spanish Loyalists.

"I won't do any fighting," he said. "I've had enough fighting to last me for the rest of my life—both in the ring and the civil war."

JAPANESE KILL 9 RUSSIANS

Tokyo, Aug. 24 (AP)—Japan's general army headquarters in Hsinking, Manchoukuo, today announced nine alleged Soviet militiamen had been executed on the outskirts of Hailar.

The executions, the communique said, were carried out last Friday. Twenty-eight others were sentenced to prison terms of from five to 20 years.

A Domei (Japanese) news agency dispatch from Hsinking asserted the condemned Russians were "remnants of a secret delegation which the Soviets sent to Manchoukuo in 1924 and 1925, charged with sovietizing the Three Rivers district," a colony lying 75 miles north of Hailar, near the Argun river on the border of Siberia.

Rebels' Air Bombs Ruin 18 Planes

(Editor's Note: H. R. Knickerbocker, who flew from the northern Spanish front to southern rebel headquarters at Seville in time to greet insurgent air pilots returning from the first air raid over Madrid, is the first correspondent to reveal today the tremendous significance of the rebels' successful blow. Destroying 18 loyalist airplanes, he explains, the insurgents have now eliminated the major obstacle to their infantry's progress towards the capital.)

Southern Spanish Rebel Army Headquarters, Seville (via Gibraltar), Aug. 24—The backbone of Madrid's Red air force was shattered today when a squadron of White war bombers dropped five huge bombs, each weighing 900 pounds, on the Getafe Airdrome at Madrid and destroyed 18 of the Reds' best planes.

WAR'S VITAL STROKE

Spain's civil war may be decided by this, the first serious attack by the White air force against the Reds' air stronghold.

The Red airplanes were lined up in front of their hangars in conference remembrance of the fact that until now there had been no menace from the White air fleet.

The White army fliers waited their fire until they had enough airplanes to make the attack decisive. With one blow they descended on Madrid, and detonated on the airdrome one and one-quarter tons of high explosives—enough to destroy everything in a city block.

WIFE OUT "PHANTOMS"

There is every likelihood that this will mean undisputed control of the air paths by the White fliers, enabling them to push their infantry forward against Madrid without regard to the Red bombers, which heretofore checked their advance, but which are now emasculated to powder on the home field.

Rivalling this news in importance is the White announcement of the destruction of the famed "phantom" Red column, with 2000 dead, at Guadelupe.

The Foreign Legion and native Moroccans, operating from Caceres, pounded and cut off Madrid's finest shock column, which had earned the name of "phantom" because it flitted with the speed and invisibility of a ghost from place to place.

Blanton Concedes Garrett Victory

Dallas, Tex., Aug. 24 (UP)—Congressman Thomas L. Blanton of the seventeenth district, who has conceded defeat in his race for renomination, is trailing more than 14,000 votes behind his rival, Judge Clyde L. Garrett.

With returns complete from eight of the 12 counties in the district the count was Garrett, 31,201; Blanton, 16,938.

VIENNA UNDER GUARD IN NEW NAZI CRISIS

Vienna, Aug. 24 (AP)—Vienna seethed today with reports, some of them apparently well-established, that police and Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg's semi-military organization, the Catholic storm troops, had been ordered to maintain a state of alarm.

Adding to the tension was the transfer of 200 soldiers through the inner city to the district containing government buildings.

Immediate reasons for the reported move were not apparent, although it was rumored a putsch was feared by anti-Nazi elements, such as those which last week rallied behind Major Emil Fey, former vice chancellor.

These persons presented a petition, containing 35,000 signatures of members of the Heimwehr, asking Prince Ernst Von Starhemberg to make Fey again the head of that private army in Vienna—a post he quit last autumn.

An accord of "friendship and peace," announced by Austria and Germany last month, has been followed by obvious suspicion and dissension in this country, leaders of various Austrian factions expressing fears that Italy and Germany had "taken Austria into camp."

Other Austrians have expressed surprise that Chancellor Schuschnigg departed from what they considered the principles of the 1ifth Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss, assassinated by Nazis in 1934.

They have wondered, also whether the agreement contained secret military clauses.

Catholics, Jews and Heimwehr groups have expressed belief the agreement marked the beginning of the end of Austrian independence, although the announcement of the accord on July 11 specified Germany would respect this nations sovereignty.

The German-Austrian accord was followed by amnesty for thousands of Nazi prisoners and announcement that difficulties in the way of Germany tourist travel into Austria would be lifted.

Very shortly, however, Nazi demonstrations jolted the country and since that time, Austrians who opposed the accord have been warning Schuschnigg the agreement was a "dangerous instrument for Austria."

The Heimwehr Prince Von Starhemberg's private army has been reported well armed. Many Heimwehr men, however, have not been paid in months and doubt has been expressed that the prince could mobilize his entire force of 40,000 without strong financial backing.

The conference, to be held probably in September and to embrace the entire mid-European situation, was advanced by Hungary.

Admiral Nicholas Horthy, Hungarian regent, made the suggestion to Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg of Austria and to Hitler.

'Dictator' Rules Seattle Strike

published since August 13 when hundreds of longshoremen, teamsters and loggers surrounded the newspaper plant following a walkout of a handful of minor editorial employes, members of the American Newspaper Guild.

The mob of pickets, many of them professional Communist agitators, prevented the union printers, pressmen and stereotypers from entering the plant, thus forcing it to suspend.

Many of the editorials particularly mention Dave Beck, Seattle labor czar. Beck is credited with being the moving spirit in the strike against the Post-Intelligencer in retaliation for that newspaper's frequent and militant crusades against Beck's attempts, through his teamsters' organization, to extend his control over many Seattle industries.

Perhaps the most vigorous comment coming from the Post-Intelligencer's most active competitor, the Seattle Times, which, the day after the strike began, published an editorial in large black face type across three columns headed:

"Yesterday was written the most shameful page in Seattle's history.

"By order of a labor leader, the Post-Intelligencer, Seattle's oldest newspaper, was compelled to suspend publication.

"Out of the quiescent fingers of a complacent mayor and chief of police, slipped the government of this once great city. Today it rests in the firm hands of Dave Beck and his brawny crew of teamsters, loggers and longshoremen.

"Gone is constitutional government. Gone is majority rule and freedom of speech.

"Seattle is now the plaything of a dictator. Practically without warning, a newspaper has been put out of business. Perhaps all will be—unless Beck's whim leads him to keep one for his own purposes.

"If a newspaper, why not a department store? Or a bank?

"Seattle has definitely been on the downgrade for some years just because of our labor situation. Our city, for a long time, has been an industry's blacklist. Our graft has been a by-word.

"The suspension of the Post-Intelligencer is more likely than not to mark the place where Seattle ties—dead.

"Dave Beck and his following comprise a very small fraction of the city's population. But one bandit can hold up a whole roomful of people.

"How do you like the looks of Dave Beck's gun?

"The shame of it!"

The Seattle Star commented in part as follows:

"Organized labor of Seattle has forcibly closed a large newspaper plant, one of the city's most important institutions. Hitler and Mussolini have not gone much further than that in matters of forcible suppression.

"A serious wrong has been done. Its results mark a strike at the vitals of American liberties.

"This item is not a 'declaration of war' on organized labor. It is a very calm and very sincere reminder to organized labor of this thing that it was permitted to be done in its name.

"The Star has vigorously condemned major practices of the Hearst newspapers in the past. We still condemn those policies.

"But—and here's the grave danger of the whole situation—if a newspaper can be closed by a group that displeases its leaders, then an individual citizen can be muzzled if his talk displeases—and this will no longer be the United States of America."

And the Washington Union:

SITUATION BAD

"The situation in Seattle is bad. Two men accused of attacking a guard at the P.-I. office were released without bail on orders of the mayor, John F. Dore.

"It indicates that the mayor has let the government slip from his fingers and placed it in the hands of labor unions, a condition not good in Seattle or any other city.

"A great paper has been forced to suspend, hundreds are out of work, because a minority wants to control things. It is not a healthful situation or condition."

From the Wyoming Republic:

"The chief labor racketeer of Seattle doesn't want the Post-Intelligencer to do business so he shuts it down. Today a Yakima farmer cannot drive his own truck loaded with his own products to the market in Seattle.

"At the city limits the highbinder takes the outfit over and levies tribute on it before the farmer can unload and go home. The racket has the backing of the mayor."

Said the Ellensburg Record:

UP TO PUBLIC

"The suspension of the Seattle Post-Intelligencer has rather conclusively to what lengths racketeering has gone in Seattle. If people are willing to bow to Dave Beck and his cohorts, they may expect this sort of thing. The public should demand these conditions or do away with them."

The Spokane Review had this to say:

"The question has been asked and it is a fair one, to what extent the representative of the national labor board in Seattle was involved in the lawless picketing of the Post-Intelligencer which resulted in the closing down of the paper owing to the fact that its employes who wished to work could not get into the building through the picket line.

"The question as to the connivance of the Roosevelt labor department is raised by the fact that the labor board filed a complaint against the Post-Intelligencer on the day that the picket line was established.

"The interpretation given by this action of the Federal labor department is very unpleasant since the Post-Intelligencer has been an outstanding opponent of the Roosevelt New Deal."

The Burlington Journal:

"Are you one of thousands of good citizens of the State of Washington who have wondered this last seven days why on earth the governor didn't do something to preserve peace, law and order in Seattle?

"Perhaps there is a better answer than you know.

"Dave Beck, wealthy Seattle labor racketeer and chief of the all-powerful teamsters' union, called and is running the strike which has forced suspension of one of the nation's largest daily newspapers.

"Are Governor Martin's hands bound from efforts to settle things by the same political ties through which the same Governor Martin appointed the same Dave Beck a member of the state parole board two years ago?"

Head Man Outsider:

Bob Kent Has Yet To Meet Quins

By MARJORIE McBRIDE
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

Callander, Ont., Aug. 24—Robert Kent, the personable young Yankee who will play the romantic lead in "Reunion," the new Dionne motion picture, hasn't been admitted to the presence of the quintuplets.

It isn't vital that he appear in the early shots, and Dr. Dafoe doesn't want them meeting too many Hollywood people at one time.

Jean Hersholt and Dorothy Peterson, the doctor and nurse of the show, have to see them, and do, nearly every day.

Kent joins the other pilgrims who march around the horseshoe outside the playground and peer through silvered glass.

"Even at that distance, I've fallen for the little ladies," he told the writer the other day. "But I'd like to get a little closer.

"Besides sleeping, I sign autographs in the hotel lobby while the others are away, and am assigned to dance with starstruck ladies at the few dances we get to attend."

PLAYED IN BOSTON

Each young Kent's big chance, although he did a creditable job in "The Bowery Princess," soon to be released. He hasn't been in pictures long.

Born in Hartford, Conn., he has been a farmhand in Vermont, a riding master in Mt. Vernon, N. Y., and a stock actor.

In 1931 he appeared at the Plymouth Theater in Boston in something the producers called "The Criminal Code." The critics called it a lot of other things, and the engagement lasted a week.

Kent's exclusion from the nursery and interior of the playground for the present is typical of Dr. Dafoe.

The Twentieth Century-Fox executives who are making this first of a $250,000 trilogy have found out that money doesn't mean as much in Callander as in movieland.

Twice a day, the babies are turned loose in the playground, and the people are allowed to file slowly past the silvered glass windows for nothing.

Dafoe won't shift the hours. He believes that guardians of the quins have built up an obligation to the public and must go through with it, expense or not.

The silvered glass is there for a purpose. It prevents the poaching of pictures of the children by amateur or outlaw professionals.

Also, it prevents the quins from seeing out. They are utterly without self-consciousness, for the reason they don't know they are on exhibition.

There were 7500 there on the Sabbath, which was gloriously sunny, but uncomfortably hot. Several in the crowd fainted.

THEY WON'T POSE

The five little girls came out in their Hollywood clothes, brought on by directors and actors anxious to conciliate them.

Each little dress was a different color, as were the fetching little cloaks and sun bonnets.

Emilie was the only one of them in a playful mood. She gamboled and chuckled, and finally went to work on the sand pile, with a shovel and a pail.

The other four, from the little fence that ranges the playground, could see something the people couldn't see, and spent most of their playtime hanging onto pickets and staring intently toward the hospital.

No pictures were made, of course. Some of the movie contingent went fishing. Norman Taurog was discovered in the midst of what he called a nice long walk. It turned out to be around the block. The chunky director can get along on very little exercise.

LITTLE EXCITEMENT

Diversions are few. A barn dance, now and again, or a sail on the lake. Nor are the actors and actresses party types. Nearly all are married. They were chosen for seriousness as well as acting ability.

When a cameraman got Bob Kent standing beside a tricky gambling machine patterned on a golf game, everybody concerned had fits.

The toys used by the quins now are all fresh from Hollywood, and cost a pretty penny in Canadian customs.

A playhouse, which cost as much as a small cottage, must be taken back to California when they go, or they must deposit a heavy duty on it if they wish the children to keep it.

More work today, with the company and the rest of us here getting a little closer to the babies.

SOVIET DOOMS 16 PLOTTERS

Moscow, Aug. 24 (US)—Death before a firing squad was the sentence meted out to 16 confessed participants in a plot, allegedly instigated by the exiled Leon Trotsky, to overthrow Russia's Soviet regime by assassinating Dictator Joseph Stalin and other high Communist officials.

Three judges of the Soviet supreme court's military collegium pronounced the doom of the alleged terrorists. Most prominent of the condemned men are Gregory Zinovieff and Leon Kameneff, who once served with Stalin in a triumvirate ruling Russia following the death of Nicolai Lenin.

In addition to Zinovieff and Kameneff—the latter a brother-in-law of Trotsky—the condemned men are Ivan Smirnoff, M. Evdokimoff, I. N. Bakieieff, S. Mratchkovsky, V. Olberg, K. Berman-Yurie, E. Goltman, V. Tervoganian, E. Dreitzer, Fritz David, N. Yurie, R. Pickel, T. Reingold and Moses Lurie.

Vera Cruz, Mexico, Aug. 24 (US)—Mutiny against the radical officers of the Spanish steamer Magellan is feared will out as soon as the vessel, loaded with a record-breaking cargo of munitions and arms, passes beyond the three-mile limit off Mexico's coast, it was predicted here today.

It was said among the Vera Cruz waterfront that members of the ship's crew who sympathize with the insurgents in Spain's civil war are likely to stage an uprising on the high seas in an attempt to take the vessel and its war cargo to a rebel port in Spain.

Under orders by the Spanish radical government to sail at dawn, the Magellan was to be escorted to the three-mile limit by a Mexican battle cruiser.

In the Magellan's holds reposes the largest cargo of arms and ammunition ever taken out of or brought into Mexico.

CITIZENS UNITE TO HALT MOB

By American Newspapers, Inc.

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 24—formal launching of the Law and Order League, a citizens' organization whose avowed purpose is to return constitutional government to the mob-ruled streets of Seattle, marked the 12th day of the shutdown of the Seattle Post-Intelligencer by a strong-arm crew of terrorists.

The formation of the league was a spontaneous outgrowth of the wave of public indignation which followed the suspension of Seattle's oldest, and only, morning newspaper. The Post-Intelligencer management decided to suspend publication rather than expose its 625 loyal employes to further injury at the hands of a mob of longshoremen, teamsters and timber workers thrown around the plant at the behest of Dave Beck, Seattle labor czar.

In an invitation to every Seattle citizen," a committee of public spirited citizens sponsoring the Law and Order League outlined the immediate aims of the league as follows:

"Maintenance of law and order is the primary function of government.

"Crimes of violence—mob activity—lawlessness in all its forms—must be driven from our city.

"The forces of crime, riot and violence must be made to realize that Seattle citizens will not stand for their activities.

"Public officials must be assured that only as they maintain law and order will they be given the support of the citizens.

"Without regard to partisan or personal considerations every man who holds or seeks office must be made to know that his first duty is to impartially enforce law and maintain order."

Billions for Japan's Army

Tokyo, Aug. 24 (INS)—Japan will spend between ¥300,000,000 and ¥350,000,000 annually on her army for the next 12 years, the newspaper Kokumin stated today.

The following is reprinted in part from Editor & Publisher for August 22, 1936:

The Guild Goes to Work

THE AMERICAN NEWSPAPER GUILD, infant A. F. of L. member, opens its union career as the willing tool for a combination of ambitious politicians and union leaders greedy for new power. That, briefly, is the story of the snap strike by which it compelled the suspension of the Seattle Post-Intelligencer. . . .

At the city's head is Mayor John F. Dore, former newspaperman, returned to a second term, after a two-year interim, by the votes of union labor and sympathizers, centered around the city's solid grip of 5,000 unionized municipal employes, including electric light and fire department forces.

DOMINATING the city's labor picture is Dave Beck, strong-jawed head of the Teamsters' Union. Mr. Beck recently showed his quality by organizing the city's automobile mechanics, against their voted wish, by closing down public garages for six weeks. With or without Mr. Beck's consent, considerable damage is said to have been done to stored automobiles in the conflict.

Mr. Beck's union works cordially with the longshoremen and lumberjacks, and reports from Seattle indicate that these shock troops were thick in the picket line which surrounded the Post-Intelligencer plant and kept the printers from reporting for duty. Mayor Dore's police were passive, except for furnishing escorts to the paper's employes through the picket cordon—out of the building.

AFTER complacently watching his police fail to protect the newspaper's right to do business, Mayor Dore tendered his offices as arbitrator. They were properly rejected. A newspaper cannot arbitrate its right to life. The Guild's fondness for "asserting its manhood" has compelled a fight to a showdown. . . .

A newspaper cannot surrender a shred of its right to organize a staff that meets its standards of efficiency, honesty, and discipline. No newspaper union attempts to interfere with this right in the mechanical departments, where its importance is considerably less than on the editorial floor. . . . The Seattle Guild, pushed from behind by its new allies, believed it would win by force, and that it could not win in an impartial consideration of the reasons for the discharge of its two members. Its act has no other rational explanation. . . .

THE Guild is definitely established as a destructive force, without will or power to carry out the high purposes of its convention declarations. It menaces the well-being, even the existence, of newspapers and no gift of prophecy is needed to realize that publishers in self-defense will have to consider membership in it a strong reason for refusing employment.

A Lovely Skin
Comes from within

Constipation is the cause of most skin troubles. Poisons from the waste matter are picked up by the blood and carried to all parts of the body, especially the skin.

No one needs to have a sallow, muddy complexion. Proper diet, exercise, abundant rest and above all—internal cleanliness. Nujol prevents intestinal poisons rather than your health and complexion.

Constipation is dangerous for anybody. Nujol is safe for everybody. It does not affect the stomach and is not absorbed by the body. Medical authorities approve Nujol because it is safe, so natural in its action.

THE EDISON COMPANY OF BOSTON

CLEAR SUSPECT IN WALTHAM SLAYING

Out of the arrest of a South End man on an alleged bad check passer, police thought for a time today that the Waltham Watch Company watchman, slaying had been solved.

A few hours later, however, Waltham detectives summoned to Boston police headquarters, discovered the man arrested and the man he accused knew nothing of the "inside" of the killing of Harry P. Bradley.

RECOGNIZED ON STREET

Arrested at Washington and Northampton streets after one of his alleged checks, mirrors reversed him, Albert W. Shea, 30, of West Newton street told police his check passing companion was one of three players off the watchman.

Two others in on the playing now find to California, Shea said.

Police immediately raced to the home of William Kimball, 34, in Oakman Park, Roxbury, and returned him to headquarters.

There Kimball admitted he had been passing worthless checks while posing as Deputy Police Superintendent William W. Livingston, head of the Special Service Squad, but denied any knowledge of the Waltham case.

TRIP UP STORY

Shea, who also had admitted using the name of a member of the Special Service Squad in passing checks, according to police, stuck to his charge against Kimball, but the Waltham offenses tripped up the story.

Police said Kimball is the same man who, June 1934, stole the car of Major George F. A. Mulvaney, master at Deer Island, and escaped in it to the mainland with two other prisoners, only to be captured at gunpoint.

Both Kimball and Shea were charged with larceny by means of worthless checks.

KILEY'S TEST TAG

Parking Space Challenge Unheeded

It was all pretty much of a fiasco today when Representative James J. Kiley of Charlestown defied the traffic commission and parked his car in one of the new spaces ordered reserved for city departments.

Kiley had announced that he would make a test case to determine if such favoritism could be shown against the general public, and there was quite a crowd of City Hall avenue and Court square bargers-on tilting back on their seats when he drove up at 9:10 a. m.

The legislator and attorney left his car in the public buildings department reserved space and went over to his office in Court street to await developments.

But Traffic Officer Joseph Carey refused to become bothered about all this and he merely went about, timing all the parked cars and making little marks on them, like all traffic officers.

So when an hour had passed, Officer Carey hung a nice red tag on Representative Kiley's car, just as he had hung red tags on other cars parked over an hour.

This will do the legislator no good as it last case, however, because there is a one-hour parking limit in the area, and some of the tags were even on city of Boston cars.

So the boys continued to sit back on their heels and wait for something like the arrival or departure of His Honor—or something.

MERRICK DUE TO RECOVER

street, Roxbury, a taxi driver, who took Merrick to City Hospital, told police he was summoned to the Merrick home in Washington street, Dorchester, by telephone.

Half carrying and half dragging Merrick, the taxicab driver took the injured man out to the cab and cared for the hospital.

Attorney Merrick, son of the late Police Captain Michael Merrick, who for a long time commanded Fields Corner police station in Dorchester, was born in Dorchester on November 25, 1882.

Graduated from Boston Latin in 1900, he attended Harvard, receiving his academic degree in 1904. He received his law degree in 1908 and since then had been practicing in Boston. He never married.

In July, 1922, he was appointed secretary and legal adviser in the police department by Police Commissioner Wilson, succeeding James H. Devlin who had gone to the attorney-general's office and who now is a municipal court judge.

RUSSIANS SLAY 28 STARVING PEASANTS

Berlin, Aug. 24 (US)—Twenty-three Russian peasants were killed and 50 others wounded when Soviet troops opened fire at Poltawa on a "hunger-crazed" crowd trying to storm the military food depot.

In the Ukraine, peasants and troops clashed due to the poor harvest and the Red army's confiscation of the entire crop, leaving the peasants without food.

Near Charkow, 2000 peasants were arrested for refusing to deliver their harvest to the military authorities.

So Worried He Wins $50 More Fine

Francis Strickland, 20, of 46 Whiting street, Lynn, was arrested this morning at 4 a. m., by Sergeant William Gillespie of the Lynn police, for driving after his license had been revoked.

"If you had my troubles sergeant," Strickland pleaded, "you'd be driving around at this hour too."

When the sergeant inquired just what his troubles were, Strickland explained he had been fined $100 in June for driving under the influence of liquor and leaving the scene of an accident. He told the sergeant he had been given until October to make payment.

"So you see," Strickland implored, "I just drive around during the quiet hours trying to figure out how the devil I'm going to get the hundred. I can't sleep, it bothers me so."

Judge Ralph W. Reeves gave Strickland something to worry about in district court this morning when he tacked $50 more onto his fine and ordered him to pay immediately.

32 More Americans Flee From Spain

Washington, Aug. 24 (AP)—The arrival in Marseilles, France, of 32 more American refugees from Spain Saturday was reported today to the State Department.

At least 16 of these were from Madrid, but reports did not make clear from what cities in Spain the others were evacuated.

2 VICTIMS IDENTIFY CARD SHARP SUSPECT

Arrested last night on charges of swindling an East Cambridge man of $8000 in a card game in a Back Bay hotel, John Tychyno, 43, of Revere, was today picked out of a lineup at police headquarters by a South Boston man as one of three card sharps who took $6000 from him in another card game.

Charles Terrain, of 33 Rawson street, South Boston, picked Tychyno out of a lineup of 12 men. He told police Tychyno and two others invited him to a card game in a downtown hotel.

One player laid down four aces and Tychyno told him, he alleges, that he'd have to get more money to cover the bets. Terrain claims he went to three banks, collected $6000 and returned to the game.

He said that he was offered a drink and the next thing he knew the three men had fled and his $6000 was gone with them.

Tychyno was arrested last night at his home in Point of Pines, Revere, on warrants charging him with taking $8000 from Michael Rosimowicz, of 208 Charles street, East Cambridge.

Tychyno is alleged to have clinched a deal in which Rosimowicz was to buy a Waltham restaurant with the $8000 he had drawn from the bank.

Rosimowicz charges that the "friendly" game cost him his life's savings and the loss of the restaurant.

Tychyno will appear in Roxbury court today charged with larceny of $8000, conspiracy to commit larceny and winning more than $5 at one sitting of a game of chance.

Hospital AID WEEK Planned

Mrs. Talbot Baker and Mrs. Francis Harding are reasoneeful co-chairmen of a group of committee members who have been putting their heads together to plan a unique method of raising money for a worthy charity, Instead of having just one affair for the benefit of the Children's Hospital in Boston, they have decided to hold a Hospital Week at Pocasset, on the South Shore, and all the whole week beginning Monday, Aug. 31, with a series of interesting activities all of which will aid the hospital, Mrs. Orrin G. Wood and Mrs. Francis Beckmann are assisting Mrs. Baker and Mrs. Harding.

The crowded program will begin with tennis matches all day Monday, Aug. 31. Children under 11 years of age will compete and there will be a class for juniors. Later, men's and women's singles and mixed doubles matches will be played. Miss Marion Wood, daughter of Mrs. Orrin G. Wood of Brookline, will be in charge of the tennis with the able assistance of Miss Louise Harding, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis A. Harding of Brookline and Cataumet.

On Wednesday the racquets will be laid aside and the festivities will take on an aquatic note. At 10 a. m. 10 in the morning, boat splashing off the end of Wing's Neck, pier will indicate that children of all ages are competing in water sports. After they have climbed out and toweled themselves vigorously, a picnic lunch will be held on Wing's Neck. Mrs. Robert M. Paxton of Quincy will superintend the water sports and Mrs. U. Hasbell Crocker of Milton and Pocasset will act as maitre d'hotel of the picnic grounds.

At 2 p. m. all sorts of sailing craft, large and small will gather to compete in the handicap race. Mr. Augustus H. Fiske, Jr., has the difficult task of figuring the handicaps for the various entries and will also act as admiral of the fleet. His sister, Miss Kitty Fiske, Mr. Phillips Hallowell and Mr. Paul D. Dean will serve as adjutants.

On the following morning, Thursday, September 3, the women golfers will be out bright and early to tee off for the ladies' medal handicap golf tournament at the Pocasset Golf Club. Two days later the men will have their medal tournament over the same course.

ODYSSEY OF THE ISLANDS, by Carl N. Taylor; Charles Scribner's Sons, New York; $3.

Beginning a curiosity jaunt intended to last but a few weeks, Mr. Taylor found himself spending a year among the back tribes of the Philippines, emerging to write a fascinating book of his adventures.

In straightforward style the reader is conducted through a series of adventures as unique and weird as any he is ever likely to experience, and he is left with the feeling of wanting to taste more.

Through Mr. Taylor's eyes he visualizes the Sea Gypsies, their manners and customs, strange rites and tribal idiosyncrasies. Other tribes in varied degrees of civilization are visited. The reader, accompanying Mr. Taylor, meets with him the natural obstacles presented by the Philippines, as terrifying, almost, as the people themselves.

The interesting odyssey is interspersed with photographs taken by the author. These augment the word pictures so graphically given and help to make this one of the most absorbing chronicles of this or any season.

CANNERY ANNE, by Morris Hull; Houghton Mifflin Co., Boston; $2.

A story of the canning industry of the west coast, this book is written with great gusto by a young man who did his stint among the packers and came through to weave the yarn.

He has translated into lusty terms the story of "Cannery Anne," who came looking for work without even a pack of cigarettes to her name and stays to participate in lively love-making.

The story of the canneries alone makes a full-bodied narrative, but Mr. Hull has chosen to interweave a fictional thread that makes for compelling interest and gripping reading.

A FRAME FOR MURDER, Kirke Mechem; The Crime Club, Garden City; $2.

A prominent oil operator is murdered. Steven Steele, amateur criminologist, takes up the hunt. Result, a thrilling and vitally gripping detective yarn of the first water.

Suspects in this case include a chow dog and a monkey. Then, too, there are Fielding Garnet, who filched the victim's sweetheart and Lola Van Roth, the actress daughter of a radio parson.

Wedding PLANS Announced

Mr. Malcolm Dunn of Boston and Lee, Mass., is accumulating quite a bit of experience as a wedding attendant.

Last Saturday he acted as best man for his brother-in-law, Mr. David Farragut Edwards at his wedding to Miss Lydia Pratt Cohen which was held in Belmar, N. J., and on Saturday, September 12, he will be one of the ushers at the wedding of his sister, Miss Barbara C. Dunn of Lee, to Mr. F. Shepard Johnson of Stone, Staffordshire, England.

Miss Dunn, who is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Edward W. Y. Dunn of Jersey City, N. J., has just announced her complete wedding plans. The ceremony will be held in the Lee Congregational Church, and Mrs. Paul R. Fitchen of New York will be the matron of honor. There will be four bridesmaids, Miss Anna Wallace of Boston, Miss Charlotte and Miss Pamilla Dunn of Orange, N. J., and Miss Grace P. Wilson of Pasadena, Cal.

Beautiful CHURCH Wedding

St. John's Church in Peabody was beautifully decorated yesterday morning for the wedding of Miss Eileen Hicks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Hicks of Andover street, who was united in marriage to Dr. William McHugh, son of Mrs. Marie and the late Stephen McHugh of Peabody, formerly of Salem.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, Mr. Melvin Hicks, at a nuptial mass at 10 o'clock at St. John's Church, Rev. Father George Mullin, pastor, officiating.

The bride wore a lace gown with a standing collar, of Queen Elizabeth design, and her long tulle veil extending into a train, while the train of her gown was fashioned with seeded pearls to a headdress. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses. Her attendants were, Mrs. Helen Carew of Lynn, matron of honor, and the bridesmaids included Mrs. Edna McGrail of Gardner, Maine, the former Miss Edna Wheeler of Peabody, before her marriage; Mrs. Anna Dewar of Hamilton, sister of the bride; Misses Mary Esther Hicks, sister of the bride, and Lillian McHugh, sister of the groom.

The matron of honor was attired in aqua silk, carrying a bouquet of talisman roses and her accessories were of tea rose. All bridesmaids were gowned in deep ivory satin, wearing brown picture hats and slippers, and carrying talisman roses intermingled with delphinium. Rose Mary McHugh of Danvers, was the dainty flower girl and Arthur Donahue of Belmont was the ring bearer.

Frank McHugh, brother of the groom, came from Southbridge to be his brother's best man. The usher group included Joseph Cassidy, Dr. John Walsh of Peabody, William Keenan of Dorchester and David Hicks of Peabody, brother of the bride. Thomas McHugh, director of St. Thomas Church choir, was the soloist.

A reception followed at Putnam Lodge, Danvers, after the wedding breakfast was served. Among the more prominent guests were Senator David I. Walsh, and his three sisters from Clinton. Senator Walsh had been attending the international convention at Toronto, Canada.

Bridal Couple Will Tour Golf Links on Honeymoon

Mildred and Ted were married. With champagne flowing with as much ease as the rain was falling the bridal pair were toasted again and again and finally set off on their golfing tour of the White Mountains and the Adirondacks.

St. Joseph's Church in Medway was decorated with smilax and gladioli for the 10 o'clock nuptials on Saturday, at which Mildred Claire O'Donnell became the bride of Edward O'Brien of Cambridge.

Mildred was an exquisite bride , a redingote dress of heavy white satin beneath a veil of tulle which fell from a tiny coronet of braided ivory satin. A bouquet of roses, lilies of the valley and orchids completed the ensemble.

Her brother, Frank, gave her in marriage, while sister Grace served as her honor attendant. Grace was gowned in nile green chiffon heavily brocaded and wore a smart bicorne hat of green velvet.

Attending her were four bridesmaids, similarly clad in pale pink chiffon frock which topped pleated slip of heavy satin. Their tiny pink velvet bicornes were trimmed with flat bows of green velvet. For flowers they carried roses and delphinium.

In the group were Mrs. Edward Markey of Needham . . . the former Kathleen O'Donnell . . . Mrs. Frank O'Donnell . . . Genevieve Broderick and Madeline O'Donnell . . . cousins of the bride, and Mary O'Brien of Cambridge, sister of the groom.

John O'Brien was his brother's best man. Ushering at the ten o'clock ceremony were Edward Markey, Frederick and Francis O'Brien of Cambridge, brothers of the groom, John Joseph Canney, Jr., John Barry and William Edmunds of Cambridge.

Among the many guests were a score or more of Cecilian Guild members and their husbands. Mr. and Mrs. William Arthur Reilly . . . the latter wearing a tailored frock of navy blue lace beneath her sable stole . . . Mr. and Mrs. James Collins and Mr. and Mrs. John F. Fitzgerald, Jr. Mrs. Collins wore a bright green sport coat with her white frock . . . Mrs. Fitzgerald's crinkled crepe was edged with bright green . . . the same note repeated in her smart beret.

Also Mr. and Mrs. Edward McManus, Mr. and Mrs. Neil Crowley, Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Berry and Dr. and Mrs. William Kenney.

Another gay group of the bride's friends included Marie and Katherine Barry, Mrs. Marshall Hall, Jr., Mrs. John Quinn, Helen Mahoney and her mother, Mrs. John Mahoney of Weston.

The bride was educated at Framingham Teachers' College and has been active in affairs of the Cecilian Guild. Mr. O'Brien, the son of Mr. and Mrs. John O'Brien of Cambridge, was graduated from Boston College.

Fall Debuts Planned

Two dates which are circled with red crayon on the debutantes' calendar are October 3 and 14.

On the former date Miss Mimi and Miss Elizabeth Van Antwerp, twin debutante daughters of Mr. and Mrs. George T. Van Antwerp of Commonwealth avenue and Beverly, will make their debuts at a luncheon. Mrs. Leverett Saltonstall Tuckerman, who is the twin sister of Mrs. Van Antwerp, will also receive at the luncheon.

On October 14, Mr. and Mrs. E. Preble Motley, Jr., of South Hamilton, will give a large dance at the Myopia Hunt Club for the formal presentation of their daughter, Marjorie.

"THE BOY CASTAWAYS" BY JULES VERNE

CHAPTER 13

There was a camp fire there, not far from the mouth of East River. Briant had seen it and soon he saw its glimmer reflected on the trees.

Watson and his band were still camped close to the little harbor of Bear-Rock. The murderers of the Severn had not abandoned Chairman Island. The young colonists were still exposed to attack and there was no longer any security for French Dan!

What disappointment Briant felt! Evidently unable to repair the boat, Watson had had to give up the idea of sailing towards one of the neighboring lands. And yet, there must be some in these parts. There was no longer any doubt on that point.

Briant, having completed his observations, prepared to descend. The wind was getting colder and the oscillations strengthened the needle of a working instrument which would make the landing difficult.

After assuring himself that the signalling array was fast strengthened, Briant allowed the ball to slide down. A few seconds later it arrived in the hands of Garnett. Immediately the lowering of the captain began to bring the apparatus back to earth.

While Mr. Kite was descending, Briant was still looking in the direction from which the glimmers of light had reached him. He could see, now from the eruption, and nearer, on the coast, the fire of a camp.

Meantime, Doniphan, Baxter, Wilcox, Service and Webb were vigorously handling the capstan. They, too, had seen that the wind was becoming stronger. They could feel it by the smacks which the sea administered and they were anxious about Briant, who must be feeling the rebounds. Three-quarters of an hour after Briant had given the signal, the wind blew with great force.

Rope Breaks!

At that moment the superkite was about a hundred feet above the lake.

Suddenly a violent shock was felt. Wilcox, Doniphan, Service, Webb and Baxter, whose support had given way, were thrown violently on the ground. The rope of the axis had broken.

And in the middle of cries of terror, the name was called again and again:

"Briant! . . . Briant! . . ."

A few minutes later Briant jumped on the beach and was falling with a loud noise.

"Briant! . . . Briant!" cried Jack, who was the first one to hug him in his arms.

"Watson is still there!"

Those are the first words which Briant spoke when his companions joined him.

When the rope broke, Briant felt suddenly and positively moved, as when the kite was operating like a parachute above him, letting out of the mantle before it had reached the surface of the lake was the most important thing to do. Just where it was about to be submerged, Briant took a dive and, good swimmer as he was, he had no trouble in reaching the shore, four or five hundred feet away.

The kite, lightened of its weight, disappeared sideways like a huge bird, narrow away by the wind like a gigantic aerial kite.

Every one of the boys was on the defensive. Doniphan, Baxter, Wilcox and Webb, armed with guns and pistols, at first doubted whether it was Briant himself who had returned.

Kate, who had attempt to force them.

Others were propping the doors with the stones when a voice called from outside:

"Help! help!"

Out there was a human being, probably in danger of death, and he was asking for assistance.

"Help!" repeated the voice, and this time it was only a few steps away. Kate, near the door, was listening . . .

"It's him!" she cried.

"Him?" asked Briant.

"Open! . . . open the door!" ordered Kate.

This was done and a man, streaming wet, rushed into the hall.

It was Evans, the mate of the Severn.

At first Gordon, Briant and Doniphan remained motionless at this unexpected sight of Evans. Then, instinctively, they sprang towards the mate as if he had been a savior.

He was 25 to 30 years old, with large shoulders, strong and vigorous. Clear eyed, large forehead, and intelligent and sympathetic face, giving the impression of a strong character. His face was partly hidden by an uncared-for beard which could not have been trimmed since the wreck of the Severn.

Hardly inside, Evans put his ear against the door which he had quickly closed. Hearing nothing from outside, he came forward to the center of the hall. Looking at the young people who surrounded him, he murmured:

"Yes! . . . children! . . . only children! . . ."

Suddenly his eyes brightened, his face beamed with joy, his arms opened . . .

Kate was coming towards him.

"Kate! . . . he cried. "Kate, alive!"

And he took her hands as if to assure himself that they were not those of a dead woman.

"Yes! now I feel like you," answered Kate, "God has saved me as He has saved you, and it is He who sends you to the help of these children!"

The mate, with his eyes counted the young boys gathered around the table.

Fifteen," he said, "and hardly fit for six shot to defend themselves . . . Never mind"

"Are we in danger of being attacked, Mr. Evans?" asked Briant.

"No, my boy, no—at least not for the moment," answered Evans.

They were eager to know the mate's story, but first it was necessary for Evans to have food and dry clothes. He had swam the Zealand River and he had had nothing to eat for 12 hours, and he had not been able to stop for a single moment since morning. Clothes, venison, biscuits and hot tea, and a quarter of an hour later, Evans was telling the story of the events which had taken place since the sailor had been thrown on the island.

Wine Tweed Awarded Tag

"CARMINA" is the name of the new, vibrant wine shade used in this three-piece travel tweed—a Fashion Congress winner modeled by Miss Margaret Swift.

A vivid crimson-wine, it hints of brave Castilian blood . . . and roses thrown on hot yellow sand . . . and all the poesy of Spain that's to be a part of this fall's fashions. For you are to hear more and more about it. To come back to the practical aspects of this three-piece suit—it offers lots of wardrobe interchanging. Its high-buttoned jacket may be accompanied by blouse, sweater, or hold its own without either. The slim skirt is interchangeable, of course, as is the conveniently full-length coat with its collar of crisp black and white raccoon. For the month of August only, this suit is to be under forty dollars.

Tempting DESSERTS With FRUIT

FROM MARTHA LEE'S MONDAY MORNING BROADCAST OVER STATION WMEX

MAKE THE MOST of the fruits in season and serve fruity desserts every time, for their season at best is short.

Blueberries, peaches, pears and plums are everywhere around and Gravenstein apples, the first of the fall crop, are coming to market. They are inviting served as they are, but vary their appeal and make them up into tempting pies and puddings.

Here is a blueberry ice cream pudding—a three-in-one dessert combining berries and ice cream in a pudding.

BLUEBERRY ICE CREAM PUDDING

1 cup buttermilk
2 cups toasted bread crumbs
3 tablespoons butter
1 cup sugar
Few grains salt
¼ teaspoon grated nutmeg
2 eggs
1 tablespoon lemon juice
¼ teaspoon soda
1 tablespoon water
1 cup blueberries
¼ cup flour
Vanilla ice cream

Pour the buttermilk over the bread crumbs. Cream together the butter and sugar and add the salt, nutmeg, well beaten eggs, lemon juice and soda dissolved in water. Combine the two mixtures and fold in the blueberries, sprinkled with the flour. Pour into a buttered square pan and bake in a moderate oven (350 deg. F.) for about one hour. Cut in squares and serve while still warm with the ice cream. Serves 6 to 8.

BAKED PEACHES WITH WINE

6 large peaches
1 tablespoon butter
½ teaspoon mace
Grated rind of one lemon
½ cup water
3 cup sugar
2 tablespoons sherry wine.

Peel peaches, put in a baking dish and add butter, water, mace, sugar and wine. Grate rind of lemon over the top. Cover and bake in 375 deg. F. oven, until the peaches are tender, 20-30 minutes. Serve hot. The pits flavor the fruit so delicately that they should not be removed. A delicious dessert served either hot or cold. Canned peaches may be used and one tablespoon Muscatel wine added to replace the fresh peach pit flavor. Place a spoonful of whipped cream on top of each peach, garnish with maraschino cherry. Serves 6.

APPLE CRUMB

6 medium-sized sour apples
1 cup brown sugar
1 cup flour
4 tablespoons butter

Pare, core and slice apples into shallow dish. If moisture is needed because apples are dry, cook up skins in water for the liquid. Mix flour, sugar and butter and sprinkle over top of apples. Bake uncovered in a moderate oven for one hour. Serve with cream or top milk. One-half teaspoon nutmeg or cinnamon may be added to the crumb, or a little lemon juice to the apples if desired.

"Your Figure, Madame!"

By IDA JEAN KAIN

(Copyright, 1936, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

THERE IS no age limit to reducing. With obesity, there is a predisposition to degenerative changes of the heart and blood vessels. In addition to making you more comfortable, a reduction in weight may extend your lifeline.

In reducing weight, it is physical condition rather than age which must be considered. Excessive overweight at any age makes it necessary for the reducer to undergo a thorough physical examination as a preliminary to her program. When one has passed the half century mark, this examination becomes increasingly important.

You want to know whether there are any worn-out parts in your machinery before you begin to make changes. However, your doctor will probably agree that less weight would improve your health and increase your chances of a hale old age.

Age No Bar

On a scientific reducing plan you will take your weight less slowly. You have been carrying some of this weight for years and you cannot expect to drop it abruptly without incurring physiological penalties. If you wish to improve your appearance, you must consider your skin's elasticity. This elasticity is decreased not only with age, but with the undue stretching it gets with overweight, and it is very important that the supporting fatty tissue be removed gradually. Let one-half to one pound per week be your reducing speed limit.

By all means, take mild exercise if you are able to do so, but be guided by your doctor. You cannot exercise with a heart condition or excessively high blood pressure, or other complications, but this does not prevent curtailment of your food intake to check a further storage of fat.

Excessive weight makes unnecessary work for the various organs, obstructs bodily functions, and is a burden to be carried about, contributing as it does to discomfort and fatigue. It is not natural to grow heavier as you grow older.

Flower Quilt

DOGWOOD APPLIQUE PATTERN 1250

Dogwood blossoms, strikingly outlined against a medium ground, make a lovely quilt, and an easy one too, for they require but three patches.

Having eaves a darker color sets off the whole design. French knots fill the centers, outline stitch accents the petals. The block is 8 inches square.

Pattern 1250 comes to you with complete, simple instructions for cutting, sewing and finishing, together with yardage chart, diagram of quilt to help arrange the blocks for single and double bed size, and a diagram of block which serves as a guide for placing the patches and suggests contrasting materials.

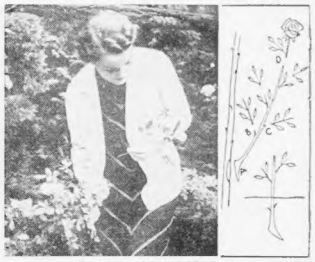
Roses For Small Gardens



The Correct Way to Slip Roses

SUE'S garden is so beautiful! All her neighbors are asking for slips and seeds to have a garden like hers.

Her pink rambler rose made such exquisite bouquets in round glass bowls in her blue dining-room.

Now everybody wants to make sure not to get slips from the tea and the pink rambler mixed, so Sue is cutting them while the roses are still in bloom.

She cuts a rose shoot, taking a "heel" from the main stem as shown in sketch at A. She removes two leaf sprays B and C from the bottom of the slip, pinches off the flowers and pair of the stem at D and half of each remaining leaf spray, as shown in sketch. The slip must be small enough to go under a fruit jar.

She sets the slip in the ground with two leaf axils below ground level. Then she covers the slip with a glass fruit jar until it is well rooted. Those fall rains will do wonders for it. In fact an excellent time to slip roses is in early autumn after the leaves fall. But they may be rooted any time during the growing season if they are well watered and are covered over during the winter.

Practical gardening tips like these are offered in our 40-page booklet, Gardening Made Easy. Just how to manage a garden the year around, what to plant, how to fight pests, winter protection. Written by an experienced horticulturist.

Send 15c for our booklet, Gardening Made Easy, to Boston Evening American, West 19th Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Josephine Culbertson on Bridge

Some people are annoyed by competition. When they play Bridge, a bid by another player is a red flag rather than a source of information.

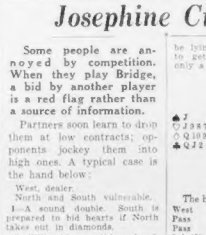
Partners soon learn to drop them at low contracts; opponents jockey them into high ones. A typical case is the hand below:

West, dealer.
North and South vulnerable.

1—A sound double. South is prepared to bid hearts if North takes out in diamonds.

2—With his worthless hand, North bids the lowest ranking suit.

3—East would have bid with a much weaker hand. The double of the spade bid urged a heart takeout. North apparently did not have enough hearts for a takeout in that suit and East has must therefore be split between South and West and West must be lying low, waiting for South to get up high enough. East, only a singleton heart. The suit



The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Dbl. (1)
Pass	2 ♣ (2)	2 ♡ (3)	2 ♡ (4)
3 ♢ (5)	Pass	Pass (6)	3 ♡ (7)
Dbl. (8)	Pass	Pass	Pass

therefore, provides West with a choice of suits with which to jockey South into position.

4—South should take this opportunity to pass to find out whether North can re-enter the bidding freely.

5—West would be willing to double two hearts but correctly decides that there is no point in doubling two-odd when he will almost certainly have a chance to double a higher contract.

6—East takes the free raise with a grain of salt. At this point the only question in his mind is, "Will South snap at the bait?"

7—Hook, line and sinker!

8—Off with his head!

West opened the fourth best diamond, East winning with the King. Diamonds were continued and South ruffed. He optimistically tried two high trumps. When West saw the ten of trumps fall from East's hand, his chief concern was to obtain the lead as soon as possible to complete the job of drawing trumps.

He obtained the lead twice in clubs to lead trumps. Thus declarer was prevented from making his small trumps by ruffing and South succeeded in making only six tricks for a penalty of 800 points.

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Secretary Is Innocent Victim

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

The controversy started by Professor Smith of Boston University when he said the perfect secretary is one who would quit her job if she found herself in love with her boss, is like a snowball rolling down hill.

It gathers both speed and volume as it goes on, and the amount of mail I receive on the subject seems to increase rather than diminish.

The good professor said, as I recall it, that unless the secretary, under those conditions, quit her job, either her love affair or her boss's business must suffer.

Today we have a case where the business suffered because gossiping friends caused the Home Wife to take seriously an attraction between her husband and his Office Wife that the two most concerned did not take seriously at all.

Read the man's letter, and see what harm can be done by groundless gossip.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:—

The trouble in my case was not with the "office wife." We liked each other a lot. She knew more about my business than I did. She saved me the time and trouble required to read dull reports and seemed to enjoy them because they helped the business. She could put her hands on any letter, report, card index, etc., at a moment's notice.

Her salary was no more than her services would have commanded in any other first class office. Sometimes, quite often in fact, I took her to lunch.

Now this little mutual admiration society of my secretary and myself didn't in any way injure the lady who bore my name. My wife and I had a dozen interests in common—the children, our home, the cottage at the seashore where we entertain house over weekends, our friends, our card club, our garden, our dogs—and dozens of other things.

My secretary and I had only two things in common—mutual devotion to my business interests and a mutual attraction for each other. The attraction was overwhelming, but it was real. One of our friends—you know the kind from whom nothing escapes—asked my secretary and me at lunch one day, and went immediately to my wife with a very pretty story.

"SHE WAS AN ANGEL"

My wife took to tears and consulted her brother, who is a lawyer. It got back to my 15-year-old daughter ad my 13-year-old son, and those children would handle it to me. My daughter would come to my office and turn up her nose at my secretary, and once repeated a very nasty name in passing my desk.

My wife's family began calling family conferences and demanding my presence. After two or three of these I declined to attend. There was nothing to discuss.

To sum up the situation, my secretary left on her vacation, and at the end of her holiday asked for an extra two weeks without pay. This was granted. Then I received a letter from her, friendly but businesslike, saying she had taken a position with a firm in another city.

You see from that, she was an angel, according to Professor Smith. But my wife still raises Cain, and my business has suffered.—J. H.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been going "steady" with a fellow for 10 months and I still can't understand him. He is 25 and I 19. He says he wants to marry me, but when we are both at a dance or any place like that, he hardly knows me. He'll hang around other girls and dance with them, but he won't come near me.

Others people notice his rudeness, too. Why sometimes he doesn't even come near me, and when he does it is usually just before the last dance. Still, he never fails to ask me to ride home with him.

Am I fool to go with him? I still love him. What would you do?—PERPLEXED.

DEAR LITTLE GIRL:

If a man is so lacking in consideration for you before marriage, one can imagine he'd be a lonely wife whom you are foolish enough to walk to the altar with him.

Perhaps you are not so good a dancer as you think you are. That would probably explain this young man's avoiding you. Perhaps your particular style and his do not "click" together. There are some men with whom I could never dance. We seem to be always moving in the opposite directions. Every woman, I believe, has had the same experience.

But if this boy really loved you, he would partner all your mistakes on the dance floor. He would realize that it was YOU, not the hall, he was going to marry.

If you take my advice you will accept invitations from other boys. Youth passes quickly, and it is foolish to waste it on poor husband material.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Bright Star

POSED BY ROCHELLE HUDSON

Beautiful Rochelle Hudson Gives Recipe for Facial

By DONNA GRACE

HOLLYWOOD—We spent part of yesterday forenoon with the petite, vivacious Rochelle Hudson, and found her to be just as charming as she looks.

The meeting took place while we were at the beautiful 20th Century-Fox Studios, and after going about a bit it was time for lunch, so we went into the studio cafe and enjoyed the thrill of real studio life.

There were many important stars and players grouped about at the various tables among whom we noticed Warner Baxter, larger than we thought he was; Binnie Barnes, Tibbett, looking much thinner than he was the last time we saw him in New York. Then there was the gorgeous Loretta Young, Robert Kent, the romantic Don Ameche and others.

EXOTIC MINIATURE

Rochelle is the exotic type, but quite in miniature form. She is five feet four inches high and weighs 105 pounds. One would call her a brunette, but her hair is a dark chestnut, and in the sun light it is full of glints and tinges of bronze. Her eyes are beautiful, but the kind that change with every mood and are difficult to describe. They have been correctly called a smoky sapphire blue, and her lashes are long and natural.

We found her to be a gay, happy and supremely sophisticated girl.

She wears the modern Hollywood Summer make-up which, I learned, is the absence of all make-up, except lipstick—rich powder and no rouge, but she does apply just a suggestion of vaseline on the eyelids. This little clever touch gives a smart, well-groomed look, and when there is not too much vaseline used, the eyelids have a silver sheen.

When we asked her how she kept so slender, she laughed and asked how she could put on a pound or weight. She tells us, as many of the other girls do, she never diets but just eats carefully. Her entrance: "When I eat meat I do not eat starches, such as breads and potatoes."

Rochelle says that as far as screen make-up is usually preceded by an application of creams. Then the dusting on itself is nearly always a creamy base, and when it is finally removed, a cream or oil is used. So she thinks that is enough cream for any face.

We left the dining room and went to her dressing room, which consists of a luxuriously furnished suite of two large rooms, a bath and shower, a refrigerator, "I can cook," she told us, "and this morning at home I made some baked eggs and ate a million of them."

SUCCESS

To be successful in pictures, she thinks a girl must be willing to give up nearly all late parties, read the classics and modern literature, too.

We said goodbye and were just completing our notes when our telephone rang. It was the little Miss Rochelle, all excited, telling us she was just assigned to play in the new "Quins" picture and was leaving at once for Canada. She will carry the love interest with Robert Kent, and others of the original cast, and we are sure it will be interesting.

I will be glad to send you her grand Facial Massage Method and Packs for the Skin, if you will enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for each, and address Donna Grace, Boston Evening American.

Health

Drink Plenty Of Water

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

"I AM SO thirsty I can drink gallons of water." This is an exclamation often heard during the summer months when the humidity is great and the temperature rises.

But, unfortunately, most persons fail to remember that a certain amount of water is essential to health at all seasons of the year.

Few of us realize that over two-thirds of the weight of the body consists of water. It is found in different parts of the organisms, in greatest abundance in the muscles.

A great deal of the water is used in the normal activities of the tissues and the cells of the body. Life is maintained by means of chemical reactions. Without water these reactions cannot happen. A chunk of rock salt held in your hand would mean nothing to your tissues. Dissolve even a small bit in water and drink the solution. Then the cells are capable of acting.

When there is a serious lack of water in the body, "dehydration" occurs. This condition is indicated by loss of weight and poor health. If dehydration, loss of fluid from the tissues, persists for any length of time, serious damage results and life itself is endangered.

PROPER BALANCE

The proper water balance is maintained by the intake of water contained in the foods as well as in the fluids taken. If this is disturbed, the balance is disturbed. Sometimes the water balance is upset because of some constitutional disorder.

For example a sufferer from some severe intestinal disorder, autointoxication, kidney or liver disease, may be unable to utilize the ordinary water intake. In such cases, fluids must be supplied by unusual measures. This can be accomplished by the injection of water under the skin or directly into the blood vessels.

Under normal circumstances and especially during warm weather, it is wise to drink at least six to eight glasses of water a day. I am often asked whether this should be taken during meals or between meals. There is a difference of opinion about this, but in my opinion it matters little, providing the intake of water is sufficient to maintain the normal balance.

Married Comrades

By Adele Garrison

CHAPTER 81

THE TRADITIONAL mice were not quieter than Mary and I, who sat in our chairs without stirring, while she rocked Baby Faith and sang to her to get the child back to sleep.

"Close your eyes, my baby, my baby," she crooned, but from my vantage point across the room, I saw that my small daughter's eyes were wide open, also that they held restlessness.

I fairly held my breath in fear of what she would do next. Whatever it might be, I was sure that I would be blamed for it, for dearly as my mother-in-law loves me, and I am sure of her affection, I am her official scapegoat for everything that goes wrong.

FAITH AWAKENS

She's almost asleep," Faith's trusting grandmother sang, and as if she were waiting for a signal, our imperious little princess raised her head from her grandmother's shoulder, looked around with a triumphant chuckle and wriggled against Mother Graham's prisoning arms in what I recognized as her signal to be put down on the floor.

"There!" she ejaculated, glaring at Mary and me. "You've wakened her. I had her just about asleep when you two came bursting in here. Now the Lord knows when I will get her off again."

Knowing Faith and her ways, I told myself that it was indeed a case for divine prescience. No mere human could predict anything about her probable yielding to slumber when she once had been roused.

My sentimental nostalgia at the lovely picture of the grandmother rocking her grandchild was somewhat weakened by the reflection that if my mother-in-law had left the baby alone when she whimpered, as Katherine would have done, Faith would have snuggled down into her blankets once more and gone peacefully to sleep again.

GRANDMOTHER RESOLUTE

I choked back an impulse to say, "Oh! Mother, do let her down!" But I knew better than to interfere. My mother-in-law had decided that her grandaughter was to go to sleep again, and her resolute old face said that nothing was to interfere with her management of the affair.

So it was that Mary and I quickly watched while Mother Graham held the wriggling baby firmly against her shoulder and resumed her rocking and crooning.

For a moment Faith appeared too astonished to do anything save gaze at her grandmother with such amazement depicted on her tiny features that I felt Mary grip my arm. I knew that she was as perilously near laughter as I. I knew, also, that as far as a baby of her age could reason, Faith was receiving the shock of her young life.

"There, there, there, my pet!" sang Grandma Graham.

Just when my mother-in-law would get tired of her bargain, I did not know, but I sat tensely waiting, ready for any request she might make of me.

And then, without warning, the door opened and Katherine came into the room swiftly, silently, evincing no astonishment, but going straight to the screaming child and picking her deftly from mother-in-law's arms.

SHOPPING WITH PRISCILLA PRICE

Dearest Anne:

Lovalon Tints While It Rinses

If your hair has a dull, streaked look about it these days, you can thank those lazy hot's spent lolling in the sun! But take heart — a mere shampoo rinse, inexpensive and no trouble at all to use at home, will bring out all the high-lights—add a lovely lustre—while it tints your hair back to its natural shade! It's Lovalon—and it's a pure, harmless vegetable rinse—not a dye—not a bleach! It will not rub off—but washes off! Platinum Lovalon is marvelous for white or grey hair—it removes yellow streaks. You'll find it in twelve shades in the Walnut Room, street floor, R. H. White's.

Have You Heard About That New Powder That Preserves Silk Stockings?

I found it in Filene's—it's called "Tuxite." It's a grand idea—and a great boon to us working gals that are always groaning over "Runs." Before wearing your stockings—rinse your hose and shake a little of this "Tuxite" in the water. Tests made by the Tuxite Company show that new hose treated with a solution wear from 2 to 5 times longer—and become practically rain-spot proof, as well! One treatment is enough for the life of a pair of silk stockings, preferably when they are new. This "Tuxite" forms an insoluble aluminum coating on the yarn which strengthens the stockings, postponing the inevitable run. And this marvelous powder also tends to prevent bagging and reduces the likelihood of damage from garter strains! When you think what this means to your Budget I know you'll be dashing right up to Filene's for this miraculous "Tuxite"—especially when I tell you it comes in a 2-ounce can for 25c and a 6-ounce can, 50c. You'll find "Tuxite" in Filene's Gadget Shop, street floor.

This Lapin Swagger Is Priced at $48 Monday and Tuesday at Leeds!

This is the last week you may have this famous Permanent at $7.50. Just twice in the whole year does L. Max, Jr., lower the price of this wave. It is regularly $10 —it's an $10 Permanent that will leave your hair soft and curly and with life and beauty. If you've never had an L. Max Wave I assure you it's truly unusual—and too lovely for words. Hair difficult to curl—hair that is very fine, bleached or dyed is his specialty. L. Max, Jr., is at 145 Tremont St., 3rd floor. Telephone Dev. 7069.

It's a Grand and Glorious feeling to be entirely free of those annoying Superfluous Hairs on your face, arms and legs. But be sure you go to an expert like Miss Davidson, Demonstrator and Graduate Electrologist. In structress. Her modern scientific method is efficient and PERMANENT. Personal service. $1 per treatment. Send for booklet M. Ask about her Scientific Process for removing Acne, Blackheads, Wrinkles or Skin blemishes. Miss Davidson's new Salon is at 41 Winter St., Room 86. Telephone LIBerty 6279.

Watch for my letter next week. I'll have more exciting news.

Red-Headed Star's Life Story:

Mary Astor's Latest Love and Victory

Thorpe Threat Spurred Her to Battle

(Following is the eighth and last chapter in the amazing life story of Mary Astor, whose recent court battle rocked Hollywood.)

By DOROTHY ROE

Copyright, 1936, by International News Service.

Hollywood, Aug. 24—Mary Astor's Hollywood Odyssey has been a constant journey toward a mirage of happiness, which has remained tantalizingly just beyond her grasp.

Endowed with an ethereal beauty plus an Irish fighting heart and a German determination, this red-headed screen beauty has found success in everything except love.

Her marriage to Dr. Franklyn Thorpe already had become a mockery when once again she encountered the great adventure, this time in the person of lanky, literary George S. Kaufman, playwright to the sophisticates.

This time, Mary confided to her diary, it was that ultimate happiness for which every woman waits and waits and waits. She wrote:

"It's beautiful, glorious—and I hope it's my last love. I can't top it with anything in my experience, nor do I want to."

A year before she had discussed divorce with her lawyer, Laurie Gallagher, and then had decided to try once more to make a success of her marriage, for the sake of little Marylyn.

Love's Thrills

She was tired and bored and disappointed with life when, on a trip to New York early in 1934 she met Kaufman, and—

"It was as if I had been in a foreign country for the past four years and suddenly came home and found someone who spoke English," she wrote in her diary.

A year later Dr. Thorpe sought and gained an uncontested divorce on legal rigidity. Shocked Astor Mary's friends were numbed. Her public was nonplussed. They couldn't understand why she didn't fight back, why she didn't stand up for her right to her child.

Mary stood it for a year, during most of which time she had actual, if not legal, custody of her baby, and then she threw everything into the balance and opened the custody fight which has reverberated round the world.

Thorpe's Threat

Most of the story has been spread on the court record—Mary's bitter accusations against Dr. Thorpe, his threats to reveal the much-publicized secrets of her "million dollar diary," and the final, uneasy compromise which gave Marylyn to her mother for nine months of each year and to her father for the remaining three.

But this Mary has since told her friends is why she did it.

"I had kept quiet for a year, because Franklyn had told me I could keep the baby, even if he did have legal custody. It was a threat held always over my head that he might take her away at any time. He told me: 'We'll do things my way. I'll do anything I like with Marylyn.'

"Finally I couldn't stand it any longer, and I called up my lawyer. Everybody told me I was crazy—that a court scandal would wreck my career. Franklyn had possession of the diaries, and he threatened me with them. I had written things in them about the troubles of some of my friends, and other silly, meaningless things that might be misconstrued.

"But I couldn't stand this living always under a suspended sword of Damocles. And so I told him—'I'm sick of protecting my career—there's just one thing I want, and that's my baby. If it's the end of my career in the movies, that's that! I'll go out and get a job as a model. I'll do anything. But I'm going to have the right to raise my child.'"

It had been a sort of gallantry that made Mary keep silent at the time of the divorce. Dr. Thorpe had threatened to name Kaufman correspondent if she contested it. So she wrote to her diary:

"I love George and the best I can do is save him from a messy scandal. Maybe I'm being foolishly gallant, but maybe also I can do one nice thing in my life."

Not For Love

And again she wrote:

"The fact that I am in love with George has nothing to do with my wanting a divorce, and Franklyn knows it."

As she fought for her hard-won success in movies, as she fought for the right to a home and marriage, so Mary Astor, once more took up her sword and shield and strode into battle—this time for her child.

The whispers about the contents of the diary rose to a deafening chorus.

The power of the movie industry rushed in with tens of "Peace at any price!"

Playright Kaufman was subpoenaed as a witness and did a graceful fadeout. And Mary fought on, alone, with her own up. She has said since to her confidants:

"That diary gained weight like a rolling snowball. It was Mr. Kaufman's lawyer who started the first furore. He went to the producers and said—You've got to stop the case. I've read the diary and it's terrific! If it ever gets out it will ruin the industry.

"The producers apparently believed him. With every repetition the story grew. I suppose people really believed I was a feminine Casanova."

"They told me I'd lose out in any event. That I might as well give up the fight then, because I'd lose Marylyn anyway if the diary were made public.

"I began to think—What did I write in those books, anyway, to stir up so much excitement?"

Her Memories

"Then my lawyer began to wobble, and said to me, 'Mary, is there anything in those diaries that you haven't told me?'

"I said—No, I've told you everything.

"So he said—In that case, we'll fight it through.'"

Now the amazing is over and Mary has her baby—at least for nine months of the year.

She has her lovely, spacious home on Toluca Lake, with its walled garden, its shady patio, its well-stocked library and its music room.

She has the congratulations of thousands of fans, who load the postman with letters.

And she has some vivid memories of the weeks that fate can hand you on white and gilded.

She has no bitterness toward Kaufman, the disappearing lover, and she has even smile as she says to the friends who have stuck by her through the thick of battle.

"I knew how George would act—he's never faced anything in his life—even in his plays.

"I don't blame him—you can't have everything. And he simply lacks the ability to face life or realities."

She has also no autographed copy of Kaufman's last play, "First Lady," with the inscription:

"To Mary—always the first one off the press."

"Prophetic, that," says Mary Astor.

(The End.)

'Matinee Firebug' Suspect Quizzed

Memphis, Tenn., Aug. 24 (AP)—A suspect whose identity police kept secret was held today in the hunt for the "matinee firebug" blamed for seven residential fires here since Aug. 3. Authorities said the arrest was made shortly after a blaze was extinguished in the home of Rev. Alfred Linaring-Clark, Episcopal rector. Known as the "matinee firebug" because all the fires have occurred in the afternoon the incendiarist has fired only homes of well-to-do persons.

Queen Mary Hailed After Record Run

New York, Aug. 24 (INS)—With whistles screaming and pennants fluttering, the Queen Mary steamed into New York harbor today to a roaring reception, accorded her as the fastest liner afloat.

Smaller vessels that cluttered the harbor shrilled a mighty salute to the giant Cunard-White Star liner which bettered the Normandie's record for the transatlantic run by four hours and 30 minutes.

Elated passengers thronged the liner's decks as she warped into her dock.

The elapsed time from Cherbourg breakwater to Ambrose Lightship was 4 days, 7 hours and 12 minutes. The Queen Mary's average speed was 30.01 knots, as opposed to the Normandie's previous record of 29.64 knots.

Coakley and Bigney In Fiery Clash

The State Ballot Law Commission hearing rooms was the scene of a red-hot verbal battle today between Councillor Daniel H. Coakley and Robert Bigney, candidate on the Republican ticket for Coakley's berth.

Coakley, protesting the nomination papers of his opponent, suddenly turned on Bigney, who had interrupted his objections on several occasions, and shouted remarks that sent the meeting into an uproar.

Coakley then turned to Chairman McGlue and asked that the chairman keep Bigney from interrupting or eject him from the hearing room.

Coakley charged Bigney's papers were fraudulent and stated that his opponent's name could not be placed on the ballot as a candidate.

"These papers of Bigney's are loaded with names placed on the papers under the guidance of members of the Republican committee of Boston. This same committee is responsible for keeping real Republicans out of this fight against me," Coakley charged.

URGE WPA HIRE MILLION MORE

Washington, Aug. 24 (AP)—Demands that 1,000,000 additional unemployed be given Works Progress Administration jobs or that the federal government revive direct relief grants were presented today to President Roosevelt and Aubrey Williams, deputy WPA administrator, by a delegation of the Workers' Alliance of America.

The alliance, which said it represented 800,000 unemployed and relief workers in 43 states, wrote the President that its proposals would "only alleviate some of the worst horrors of the position of the unemployed."

Other demands, which David Lasser, alliance president, asserted were backed by the American Federation of Labor, included:

That wages of the 2,300,000 WPA workers be raised by setting up a $80 a month minimum and that wages above that figure be increased by 20 per cent.

That WPA workers be paid the local union hourly scale.

That payment for time lost because of bad weather be restored.

That the Workers' Alliance be recognized as a collective bargaining agency for WPA workers.

This 13-year-old Lynn girl, Eileen Pollard, was rescued from sick bed by her mother, Mrs. Ernest Pollard, when sulphur fumes filled their home in Henry avenue, early today. GOV. PETERSEN TAKES OATH

St. Paul, Aug. 24 (AP)—Hjalmar Petersen, Danish emigrant and country editor, was administered the oath of office as Minnesota's 23rd governor today, succeeding Floyd B. Olson, who died Saturday night of cancer.

Chief Justice John P. Devaney administered the oath while a small group of friends, relatives and Petersen's family looked on.

In a brief statement afterward, Petersen said:

With the goodwill and cooperation of the citizens of our great commonwealth, the State of Minnesota, which I feel I will have, I shall labor to the best of my ability, sincerely working for the common good of all, be my term of office short or long."

Meanwhile the Olson funeral cortege was enroute here from Rochester, where Governor Olson expired, after passing through Rochester streets roped off to hold back the crowds.

The body will lay in state in the Capitol here until the funeral hour Wednesday.

Princess Louise to Wed Bavarian

Copenhagen, Aug. 24 (AP)—Announcement of the engagement of 23-year-old Princess Alexandrine Louise of Denmark to Count Ludwig Zu Castell-Castell of Bavaria was made known today—reducing by one the list of those eligible, and frequently mentioned, as a possible queen-consort for King Edward of England.

Mansfield's Son To Wed Sept. 11

Walter Roe Mansfield, son of Mayor and Mrs. Mansfield, will be married Sept. 11 to Miss Dorothy F. Howlett of West Roxbury, it was announced today at City Hall.

The marriage will take place at 4 p. m. in the rectory of the Church of the Holy Name, West Roxbury, with a reception to follow at the Hotel Lafayette, Commonwealth avenue, Back Bay.

Acting as bridesmaid will be Miss Dorothy Hour of West Roxbury, a cousin of the bride-to-be, and the best man will be Samuel Sibley Dennis, also of West Roxbury, who was young Mansfield's roommate at Harvard.

Miss Howlett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Heibler Howlett of 32 Pearl Hill road, West Roxbury, became a Roman Catholic only last week.

She received her first communion yesterday in St. Patrick's Church, Wareham.

By BROADAX WALL

New York, Aug. 24 (US) — Last Friday stock speculators received a rude awakening. In a market which upturn is thought impregnable, prices suffered the most drastic break in four months. There was no ready specific excuse for the selling, which indeed was rather light when contrasted with past storms of liquidation.

TRADE OUTLOOK

Strong UPTREND IS Forecast

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

The current minor decline in trade is expected to be brief and leading observers of business trends forecast a strong uptrend during the balance of the third quarter.

At the same time some authorities predict that there will be a further strong recovery in the fourth quarter regardless of the election outcome.

Impressive trends of business plans to be put into action after election are evident, while preparation steadily moves forward before, and hoisted now by the new tax law will add to the momentum of recovery. The steel trade alone is being hoisted to peak volume levels and is reckoning that it is now believed a recession will be avoided altogether this summer. Motor makers may withdraw almost entirely from the market as they prepare new models but steel makers are not counting on any such move from a multitude of sources of important needs.

The drouth will have some bit perious effect on business but in the present competitive Washington servers are anticipating that income will be above that of 1935. The real drouth damage will be localized and the real effect will be higher price lifting the use of baling for waste paper to a new vault, may be expected to add more wages. This tax was passed not to be in spite of what some say is a better today. It may help any balance of business influences. This is in sharp contrast to the effect of business speculation failing to convert.

Notebook: Murray Corporation is said to have retained all 1936 contracts and added three new large ones. . . . While explaining why some market stocks expect the stock will be placed on an annual dividend basis of $1 per share . . . United Light & Power earnings on the $6 preferred for this year are estimated at $8 per share . . . The stock, as well as the junior equities still impress as an easy way to play a Porto Rico Sugar directors meet tomorrow and directors are expected to declare a substantial dividend.

On Saturday's weak market had dropped down to technical support levels and the quiet week-end gave opportunity to watch for signs of accumulation. These levels corresponded to the low points of the previous week's widewave movement and are likely to prove of increased importance. The market is not ready to move sufficiently fast to suggest leading sales and withstanding of short-term profit taking. But improvement in the long term outlook from an investment standpoint. And we would not count on a sharp reversing of the levels noted. . . .

Ticker Talk: If only one of the two important groups—rails and industrials—breaks the resistance noted we will look on it as a false move. But if both slip through we will be forced to conclude that the view taken here of business and trade prospect is either faulty or world events are to become more troubled . . . Mathieson Alkali is said to be benefiting from the sharp resound in demand for rayon . . . Which reminds us that Celanese has worked into a position where new purchases seem justified . . . And we like the support of today's issue of the Brookmire Counselor in this.

Bloomingdale Bros. Inc. declared a dividend of 40 cents on account of the cumulative participating preferred stock, payable October 1 to stock of record September 15. Previous dividends were 50 cents quarterly.

STOCK Prices STRONG

FEW WIDE GAINS SCORED

New York, Aug. 24—Rallying tendencies displayed by specialties whipped up buying participation generally in today's stock market.

While the activity was not of the dimension houses would have liked, many issues held gains of fractions to 3 points near the fourth hour and a few much more.

Mixed Topics

Stocks showed the weekly tendency in view of the magazine issues which stated that with domestic affairs overshadowed by the political campaign, interest in commercial matters would be relegated to minor importance for the next few months. Also, the week-end approach of May, 1936.

At the same time a moderate feeling of new confidence in the business future was reflected in the attitude of the financial district, although rate not reflected in the market. Some of the brokerage houses reported that the investment buying came near the proportions of the buying wave of the spring of 1935 in warehouses at the end of July, wealth nearly 229,000,000 gallons.

At the beginning of January ex-cal support levels and the quiet week-end gave opportunity to watch for signs of accumulation. These levels corresponded to the low points of the previous week's widewave movement and are likely to prove of increased importance. The market is not ready to move sufficiently fast to suggest leading sales and withstanding of short-term profit taking. But improvement in the long term outlook from an investment standpoint. And we would not count on a sharp reversing of the levels noted. . . .

FACTORY Auto Sales

Factory sales of automobiles manufactured in the United States and Canada totaled 343,000 units in July, against 192,905 in June and 222,598 in July, 1935, the Automobile Manufacturers Association reported today.

Sales in July last year remained at 224,000 despite heavy rain and 68,000 strikes.

Total sales for the first seven months this year 2,005,870 units, compared with 1,641,151 a year ago.

—NOTE AMERICAN—

CONFECTIONERY Sales Advance

Sales of confectionery and cocoa products manufacturers by 299 identical manufacturers were valued at $11,888,782 in July against $11,941,215 in June, a decrease of only 0.5 per cent, Department of Commerce reported today.

Sales for the first five months of 1936 in July last year remained at 224,000 despite heavy rain and 68,000 strikes.

Total sales for the first seven months this year 2,005,870 units, compared with 1,641,151 a year ago.

Comments of Brokers

Reports from technical sources we believe that approximately the 100 level in the Dow-Jones industrial average and traders could initiate the level for accumulation of selective issues for the Fall campaign.

We think that the market will retain its selective character during upswings and better believe purchase should be confined to those specific groups and issues now in favor.—F. G. Blackhurst, Paine Webber & Co. Pfeiffer.

Judging by the movements in the stock market has recorded a warning which holders of commodities should heed.—M.P. Murphy & Co.

Except for narrow trading operations, we would prefer not to initiate the first rally very far, in that a subsequent secondary selling movement should provide another opportunity to quickly add to initial purchases of the longer term type.—J. F. Malloy, Hornblower & Weeks.

The New Deal Trends Away From Law

A DISPASSIONATE analysis of governmental trends under the New Deal was presented by Dean Roscoe Pound at Harvard University's conference on "the future of the common law."

The substance of Dr. Pound's talk was that legal safeguards are being jeopardized by governmental haste to put experimental projects in motion without thorough consideration or judicial review.

"ADMINISTRATION is taking whole provinces of justice out of the purview of adjudication," he said, "and is increasingly restive under judicial attempts to subject its actions to THE MEASURE OF LEGAL principles or THE SECURITY OF COURTS."

This critical analysis was given in an atmosphere wholly free of political motive. The Harvard conference was primarily concerned with the current status of lawful procedure in the relations between government and the people.

Dr. Pound was simply appraising THE EFFECTS UPON LEGAL PROCEDURE of the emergency policies pursued by the New Deal.

THERE can be little doubt that the conclusions drawn from these discussions include the obvious fact that the rights of the people UNDER THE LAW have been sharply impaired by government action.

When government seeks to function WITHOUT JUDICIAL SANCTION and becomes resentful of subsequent curbs put upon it by the courts, the responsible administration has indeed assumed WHOLE PROVINCES OF JUSTICE at public peril.

The Russian Plan

AMERICAN workers will read with interest the dispatches from Catalonia which report the complete socialization of that Spanish province ON THE RUSSIAN PLAN.

Labor's chief interest will be in the fact that Catalonian workers are laboring UNDER COMPULSION at an indiscriminate wage equivalent to one dollar a day and food.

This wage prevails regardless of variations of skill and ability, with the competent workers BEING REDUCED TO THE LEVEL OF THE MOST INCOMPETENT.

If this is what Communism does for labor—AND IT IS—it is unthinkable that so obvious a form of slavery could ever find a foothold in America.

Kill That Hen!

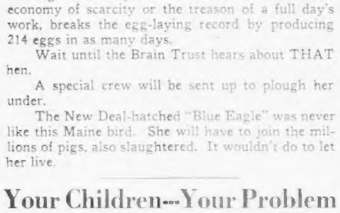
Up in Maine there is a hen which, knowing nothing of the repeal of the laws of nature, the economy of scarcity or the treason of a full day's work, breaks the egg-laying record by producing 214 eggs in as many days.

Wait until the Brain Trust hears about THAT hen.

A special crew will be sent up to plough her under.

The New Deal-hatched "Blue Eagle" was never like this Maine bird. She will have to join the millions of pigs, also slaughtered. It wouldn't do to let her live.

Your Children—Your Problem



What will these children learn?

The picture shows children entering a Dorchester school. It might be any school a month hence, when boys and girls of the nation again take up their studies.

With such pictures as this in mind, William Frederick Bigelow, Good Housekeeping Magazine's brilliant editor, asks you these pertinent questions:

"What will these children find—teachers who see in them only vessels to be filled with facts upon which science puts its seal of approval?

"Or teachers who look upon children as potential leaders who may dare life's greatest opportunities if they are shown life's deeper, richer meaning?"

For YOUR children, which kind of teacher do YOU prefer?

Think—but before you answer, read Mr. Bigelow's comment in September Good Housekeeping.

Future Capitl, Raw Deal Style

By Nelson Harding

Shall the White House overshadow
The Supreme Court and the Congress?
Shall Executive be greater Than Judicial, Legislative?

Shall the balances and checks provided
By the wisdom of the Fathers
Be discarded for a foreign
Scheme of autocratic power?

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, Aug. 24—Diary: Some bravely writ notes on Communistic undermining from Roscoe Peacock.

Yet fewer arms awake! So across town to breakfast with the knobby—dressed soldier, John Morgan, but he away. And called up Arthur Samuels, who took me to "No. 21," a desolate hideout in the ground floor of my lady and director of the Washington bridge into Jersey and by the gloomy Palisades estate. In the park, on the way home, came upon Lulu and Ed Simpson, who was love but so hard to see. Then sitting awhile with Maybelle Manning at her gown boutique.

O. O. McIntyre

Dinner in the Ritz Gardens and talked to my old landlord, Albert Kelly, swapping pretty compliments. And bowed to the actress lady, Ina Claire, and talked a moment to the critics' bachelor-poet, Charles Hanson Towne, to bed early listening to the wireless, one dull and monotonous sound off.

Among celebrity curiosa—like Fannie Brice's dead pan stooge Roger Davis—that now collects art and is advised in Gypsy Lee Rose. She is an eyeful in a showy way but not the overcrammed one might expect. She occupies an apartment, a perfect bijou, on the north side of Gramercy Park, in rendezvous where people strange to the serenity of the leafy square drift in and out. The jigsaw mosaic of the Broadway pattern. Gypsy is intelligent, quick on the conversational trigger and inclining to the Shakespeare line, "full of wise saws and modern instances."

Miss Rose's constant companion is the lady with the rocking chair name, Nita Naldi, one time headliner of the era of the films and now living in semi-retirement at the fashionable St. Regis. In her day, she was a champ movie vamp and today a study in cynicism, with especial tarty remarks for the species known as male.

Soo, too, is a party attender and shepherded for her excursions barbs. The Shuberts have lured Gypsy from burlesque. The story being she is under contracts for the next Follies, where she will do, of all things, a "burlesque."

The theatrical world in which she has been such a high spirit received the news of Enos Jank poverty vow with varying reactions. Some thought her determination to shick herself of material goods a publicity plan to sell her famous but long burdensome country estate near Tarrytown.

And others thought it a sincere gesture of a lady who has never cared much for worldly riches and has been generous to her profession. Her marriage to the husband so many years her junior is sticking.

But her life of late has been clustered—few have seen her at such haunts as the Algonquin and other forums she used to frequent. An auto accident made it necessary for her to walk with a cane.

She is no longer "Little Elsie," the jovial, boyish girl with the world genuflecting at her dancing feet. The years go by.

Charles B. Driscoll is the writing world's modern Joyce Kilmer. It was said of the poet and author of "Trees" he could keep a dozen literary jobs deftly juggling at the same time. Driscoll, Kansas born, is editor of a syndicate, turns in a daily column, writes a pirate book yearly, signs up new syndicate features and shepherds them out of their wobbles, makes at least one trip a year to such far-off places as Russia and Yucatan and has time, on the side, daily, to heckle the banker he entrusted unwisely with savings.

They are fellow commuters and every morning Driscoll circles him hawk-like with jeering epithets. It's the best free act on the commuting circuit.

Bagatelles: Willie Howard collects stuffed pups of all things . . . Martha Deane always registers from Paris, Missouri, with Missouri in her letters . . . Achmed Abdullah is a midnight movie fan . . . As is his wife, Jean Dalrymple, literary agent.

The Marry-Go-Round

By Helen Rowland

Mrs. Solomon Says:

Behold, my Daughter, how temperate a man is in all things, save golf and politics. Yeah, his manchanance is MOST irritating.

But woman is the great extremist. And whatsoever she starteth, she never stoppeth halfway. She knoweth no middle course.

When woman first began shortening her skirts, she was not content until they reached her knees. Yet, when she turned back and began to lengthen them again, she did not stop until they swept the floor and trailed two feet behind her.

Thus, my daughter, is the way of a woman, who thinketh herself in love with a man, more tempestuous than wise. For, one moment, she smothered him with affection and is TOO kind.

But when her heart turneth against him, she is one with the elephant, who never forgetteth. Her tongue lasheth him without mercy, and not one of his sins doth she fail to flaunt in his face.

But a man is intense in nothing; and moderation is his middle name. His love, however deep, is seldom delirious. And coolness or boredom is all the emotion that he feeleth, when love is done.

For, only in politics doth he lose his head and wax violent or impetuous. Only over a golf game or a political candidate can he work himself into an emotional flame of enthusiasm.

Thus is a woman's tongue broken against her; for she CANNOT make him "suffer." Verily he is EXASPERATING. Selah.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

What do you get out of life? Loneliness . . . disappointment . . . ugliness? And you blame the other fellow for it, don't you?

But is it really the other fellow's fault? Or does the blame lie nearer home? Listen — yes, it's a true story.

Two young men faced a window-dorn night.

One, venturing reluctantly into its tumult, turned up his collar — shuddered. Came a moaning . . . a shriek . . . a flare of greenish light. The man shrank back, his flesh prickling with the old childish fear of darkness. Hideous night—how he hated it! If only he were rich enough to stay inside on nights like this; send someone else to do his errands.

A wave of self-pity mingled with his fear and anger. If only he were rich! How easy life was for the rich — how cruel to the poor! He sneered. Now fear mounted to panic. He was catching cold! The doctor had warned him against exposure — his sinus trouble would return — worse yet, pneumonia! He'd be sick . . . probably die.

HE FOUND JOY

A block away the other young man stepped into the same night, but eagerly, as a swimmer flings himself into a joyous tide. He too felt old timidities arise . . . was chilled by the cold. But the consciousness of these things brushed his mind lightly as a dark wing, and was gone. His spirit rejected them.

He did not see the danger in the night, nor its discomfort. His spirit leaped away from the small concerns of the body—gave itself buoyantly to beauty. He was no longer a weak and shabby man, going on a tiresome errand. He was a spirit set free...one with the skirling wind and spindrift cloud...part of the passionate, gypsy heart of the night.

Elsie Robinson

REWARD OF EFFORT

Beauty! Up and up it lifted him . . . and on it whirled him. Until out of his ecstasy, these words were born, to be set down . . . passed along . . . to live forever—

". . . and into the wind," he wrote, "Big holes were blown into the sky; the moonlight blew about. Sometimes a high moon, liquid-brilliant, scudded across a hollow space and took cover under electric, brown-iridescent cloud-edges. Then there was a blot of cloud, and shadow. Then somewhere in the night a radiance again, like a vapor. And all the sky was teeming and tearing along, a vast disorder of flying shapes and darkness and ragged fumes of light and a green, bronze, circling halo; then the terror of a moon running liquid-brilliant into the open for a moment, hurling the sky before she plunged under cover of cloud again."

Simple sentences, but how they open the door to beauty! Yes—now that you read them, realize that you, too, have seen these things—those "ragged fumes of light" . . . that "high-moon, liquid-brilliant, scudding across hollow space." But you had no words, such as D. H. Lawrence had, to describe the night. Lawrence was a genius. And the old discontent returns. If YOU had been born a genius.

But was Lawrence born a genius, able to describe beauty with immortal words? Or did Lawrence deliberately seek beauty . . . deliberately ignore all the meaner, hopeless aspects of life and set his eyes upon the shining peaks, the streaming moonlight?

In every circumstance there is the making of a heaven—or a hell. In every contact there is cause for inspiration—or despair.

Whose fault is it if YOU find only darkness and despair?

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

Edwin C. Hill

Just as soon as we discovered the world was round we tried to climb to the top of it. Hendrik Hudson was given peremptory orders by the king to find the North Pole. At Spitzbergen Island, he and and crew knocked off and went fishing. They filled the ships log with horrendous tales of attacks by sea monsters and ice devils, providing the necessary alibi for failing to find the pole. And now, with the word "stratosphere" scarcely bedded down in the dictionary, we won't be happy until we live and travel in it.

We keep on pricking higher and higher layers. We bring down no tales of winged demons. Unerring instruments write the log. Our pilots neither ask nor need an alibi. The age of science seems to impel men to more desperate chances than did the age of faith. King Arthur's hotstove league would have been popped with tales of our modern air jousting. Dragon fighting would have seemed just a sand-lot affair. But, of course, they wouldn't have believed a word of it.

A DARING EXPERIMENT

The stratosphere test pilots make a 10,000-foot power dive for around $150, instead of a signet or accolade of the king. The "flying test tube" of the Transcontinental and Western Air Lines will hit the sub-stratosphere around the 20,000-foot level on September 15, in a transcontinental flight, which may or may not yield a speed record. They are spending $350,000 on this search for the rainbow's end.

The late Wiley Post explored the six-mile level. He believed there was a stratum layer in which planes would run like greased lightning. Science has tremendous obstacles to overcome before we start commuting between New York and San Francisco, protected through high and non-resistant air. In the forthcoming tryout, D. W. (Tommy) Tomlinson, one of the most daring test pilots, will have to use an oxygen outfit.

How to overcome the rarefied air problem is still wide open. Passenger travel in the stratosphere is but scientific stunting until this is settled. They could, of course, seal up the plane, with properly conditioned air inside, but there again is the trick of adjusting outside and inside air pressure. In scores of laboratories around the country, experts in aerodynamics are at work on this puzzle.

It looks like the start of an era. We talk a lot about the sturdy pioneers who grubbed rocks and fought Indians. Consider the test pilots, who lead many ancient into that high, purple zone of danger. These Daniel Boones of the sky wilderness take chances every day probably unmatched in the long history of human hazards. A few of them get fairly good jobs, and occasionally a piece of "serious" money for some exceptionally perilous dive, but aviation is such workaway business now that there are no glittering vaudeville and radio offers.

HAIR-RAISING STUNT

Many of the lads here, a few years ago, were newspaper headliners are obscure in-and-outers, sparring for an opening without regular jobs. If the technique or dragon-slaying had advanced like that of flying, St. George might have been punching a time clock for small pay and long hours. That power dive, necessary as we feel our way into higher air levels, is hair-raising business.

The pilot climbs to around 25,000 feet, or possibly 30,000. He rips loose on a straight downward plunge of about 10,000 feet. Then he has to pull out, almost at right angles. That multiplies the gravity stress on man and plane by nine times. Any slight flaw in materials or design means both a funeral and a write-off on the books.

Vance Breese, a crack West Coast test pilot, tapes his body from head to foot, to buttress his internal organs against that frightful wrench at the pull out. Going blind for a moment is routine in this calmly premeditated brush with death. The lenses see the blood out of the optic veins. Breese, leveling off by the feel of the thing, always has his eyes working a few seconds later. But just how much of this kind of wear and tear the human body will stand is still undetermined.

Breese heads the list of power divers in money returns. He gets $8000 for a 16,000-foot dive. Standard pay is $1500 for 10 dives, plus a $10,000 insurance policy at a rate of $20 a thousand. Army and navy testers work for their regular pay, and there are always plenty of pilots ready to do what is required. For the navy, Lee Gehlbach pioneers the long flights with the Ensembers, in an amazingly casual and careless way.

STILL TEASING DEATH

In the early days, when the fliers worked without parachutes, Bert Acosta was one of the most skilful and daring. But Bert has been grounded these past few years. Frank Courtney is a veteran test pilot, banged up many times but still teasing Valiant Jimmy Collins, failing to get into the big-money flights, lived through years of hard luck, with some incredible exploits in testing, out of which he got little. Zooming out of it by withholding the cracking good story of his adventures, he was tapped for success when something went wrong in a perilous test. Bill Cromwell is now his successor.

There is always another lad waiting to take up the challenge when one of them falls. Oldtimers on the sea say we once had iron men and wooden ships, but now we have iron ships and wooden men. I doubt that, but whether it is true or not, it doesn't go for the air. The constituency of iron in our fliers keeps right up to specifications.

That's That

By Bruce Gustin

It is not only on their own grocery bills that American workers are going to notice the increase in food prices. This increase will boost their tax bills, too. An increase in the cost of living and especially in the cost of eating automatically increases taxes. It adds to the operating expenses of penitentiaries, reformatories, jails, hospitals. It boosts the cost of relief. That gives the tax spenders an opportunity to put taxes up again.

Always remember that you are a taxpayer whether you own any property or ever receive a tax bill. If you don't own your own home, yet rent it and the rent you pay takes care of the taxes on the property you occupy. A part of the cost of everything you buy is taxes. If you drive an automobile, you pay both State and Federal taxes on every gallon of gasoline you use. If you live in a State where there is a sales tax, you pay that tax on virtually everything you buy. There is no escape for any living person from the tax collector.

Out in Nevada, George Austin is reported to have been offered a million dollars for a half interest in a gold claim he bought for $10,000 a little over a year ago. Explaining why he turned down this offer, he said he would have to pay the Federal government $420,000 in taxes and that would leave him only about one-half million. Uncle Sam is the "receiving partner" in every business enterprise. But he shares only in the profits—not in the losses.

Austin also is quoted as saying, "They got two sons. A half million probably would make loafers out of them. It's better to hold the mine and work it ourselves. The boys will appreciate it more if they have to dig the money out of the ground themselves."

He must be a wise father. Giving a boy or a man an opportunity to earn his own living is worth more to him than handing him a fortune.

The Canadian "Baby Derby" started when Charles Vance Miller, who died October 31, 1926, left approximately $500,000 to be awarded the Toronto mother bearing the most babies during the 10 years following his death, soon to be ended. Present leader in the race is Mrs. Alex Penny with 12 children. Two mothers have 10 each and two have nine each. The prize will be a Godsend to the winner. But losing will be tough on others who planned to use the money to take care of their large families.

The prize absurdity of the New Deal's AAA scheme is reported from the Philippine Islands. Fire destroyed part of a sugar cane crop. That was adjudged compliance with the New Deal's crop control plan and a payment of $7500 out of processing tax funds was ordered made to the planter. He refused to accept the money, insisting it was offered "in violation of the laws of God." His sons, who are his heirs, went into court and got an order for payment of the money to them.

Processing taxes levied under the AAA to pay farmers for producing less were paid by consumers regardless of their ability to pay. And then the money was redistributed without any regard for the needs of the recipients. It made no difference whether a farmer was rich or poor. The largest payments went to big corporations and big landowners who needed them the least.

Political observers, noting the nation-wide spread of the Anti-Roosevelt movement, predict it will result in the election of Landon. Although millions of the voters have turned against the New Deal are divided into different camps, it is generally conceded that most of those who are followers of Father Coughlin, Dr. Townsend and William Lemke of the New Deal "third party" are people who had been in the Roosevelt camp. It was the sentiment against Hoover rather than the sentiment for Roosevelt which put the latter into the White House.

Dissatisfaction with and resentment against the administration will be the decisive factor in the present campaign.

The New Deal Trends Away From Law

A DISPASSIONATE analysis of governmental trends under the New Deal was presented by Dean Roscoe Pound at Harvard University's conference on "the future of the common law."

The substance of Dr. Pound's talk was that legal safeguards are being jeopardized by governmental haste to put experimental projects in motion without thorough consideration or judicial review.

"ADMINISTRATION is taking whole provinces of justice out of the purview of adjudication," he said, "and is increasingly restive under judicial attempts to subject its actions to THE MEASURE OF LEGAL principles or THE SECURITY OF COURTS."

This critical analysis was given in an atmosphere wholly free of political motive. The Harvard conference was primarily concerned with the current status of lawful procedure in the relations between government and the people.

Dr. Pound was simply appraising THE EFFECTS UPON LEGAL PROCEDURE of the emergency policies pursued by the New Deal.

THERE can be little doubt that the conclusions drawn from these discussions include the obvious fact that the rights of the people UNDER THE LAW have been sharply impaired by government action.

When government seeks to function WITHOUT JUDICIAL SANCTION and becomes resentful of subsequent curbs put upon it by the courts, the responsible administration has indeed assumed WHOLE PROVINCES OF JUSTICE at public peril.

The Russian Plan

AMERICAN workers will read with interest the dispatches from Catalonia which report the complete socialization of that Spanish province ON THE RUSSIAN PLAN.

Labor's chief interest will be in the fact that Catalonian workers are laboring UNDER COMPULSION at an indiscriminate wage equivalent to one dollar a day and food.

This wage prevails regardless of variations of skill and ability, with the competent workers BEING REDUCED TO THE LEVEL OF THE MOST INCOMPETENT.

If this is what Communism does for labor—AND IT IS—it is unthinkable that so obvious a form of slavery could ever find a foothold in America.

Kill That Hen!

Up in Maine there is a hen which, knowing nothing of the repeal of the laws of nature, the economy of scarcity or the treason of a full day's work, breaks the egg-laying record by producing 214 eggs in as many days.

Wait until the Brain Trust hears about THAT hen.

A special crew will be sent up to plough her under.

The New Deal-hatched "Blue Eagle" was never like this Maine bird. She will have to join the millions of pigs, also slaughtered. It wouldn't do to let her live.

Your Children--Your Problem

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

What will these children learn?

The picture shows children entering a Dorchester school. It might be any school a month hence, when boys and girls of the nation again take up their studies.

With such pictures as this in mind, William Frederick Bigelow, Good Housekeeping Magazine's brilliant editor, asks you these pertinent questions:

"What will these children find—teachers who see in them only vessels to be filled with facts upon which science puts its seal of approval?

"Or teachers who look upon children as potential leaders who may dare life's greatest opportunities if they are shown life's deeper, richer meaning?"

For YOUR children, which kind of teacher do YOU prefer?

Think—but before you answer, read Mr. Bigelow's comment in September Good Housekeeping.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, Aug. 24—Diary: Some bravely writ notes on Communistic undermining from Roscoe Peacock.

Yet few seem awake! So across town to breakfast with the knobbily - dressed hotelier, John Horgan, but go away. And called up Arthur Samuels, who took me to "No. 21," a desuiad o bistro at 11 a. m.

Home and ground out my piece. And my lady and I drove over the Washington bridge into Jersey and by the gloomy Lindbergh estate to the park, on the way home, came upon Lulu and Ed Simpson, whom we love but so rarely see. Then sitting awhile with Maybelle Manning at her gown boutique.

O. O. McIntyre

Dinner in the Ritz Gardens and talked to my old landlord, Albert Keller, swapping pretty compliments. And bowed to the actress lady, Ina Claire, and talked a moment to the critic-bachelor-poet, Charles Hanson Towne. To bed early listening to the wireless, so dull and monodic I soon dozed off.

Among celebrity curiosa—like Fannie Brice's dead pan stooge Roger Davis—that now collects at smart soirees is Gypsy Lee Rose. She is an eyeful in a showy way but not the overcarmined type one might expect. She occupies an apartment, a perfect bijou, on the north side of Gramercy Park, a rendevous where people strange to the serenity of the leafy square drift in and out at all hours. Jiggled mosaic of the Broadway pattern. Gypsy is intelligent, quick on the conversational trigger and inclining to the Shakespeare line, "full of wise saws and modern instances."

Miss Rose's constant companion is the lady with the rocking chair name, Nita Naldi, one time a headliner of the silent films and now living in semi-retirement at the fashionable St. Regis. In her day, she was a champ movie vamp and today a study in cynicism, with especial tarty remarks for the species known as male.

She, too, is a party attender and cherished for her extramural barbs. The Shuberts have lured Gypsy from burlesque. The story being she is under contract for the next Follies, where she will do, of all things, a "burlesque."

The theatrical world in which she has been such a high spirit received the news of Elsie Janis' poverty vow with varying reactions. Some thought her determination to shuck herself of material goods a publicity plan to sell her famous but long burdensome country estate near Tarrytown.

And others thought it a sincere gesture of a lady who has never cared much for worldly riches and has been generous to her profession. Her marriage to the husband so many years her junior is clicking.

But her life of late has been cloistered—few have seen her at such haunts as the Algonquin and other forums she used to frequent. An auto accident made it necessary for her to walk with a cane.

She is no longer "Little Elsie," the joyous, hoyden with the world genuflecting at her dancing feet. The years catch up.

Charles B. Driscoll is the writing world's modern Joyce Kilmer. It was said of the poet and author of "Trees" he could keep a dozen literary jobs deftly juggling at the same time. Driscoll, Kansas born, is editor of a syndicate, turns in a daily column, writes a pirate book yearly, signs up new syndicate features and shepherds them out of their wobbles, makes at least one trip a year to far off places as Russia and Yucatan and has time, on the side, daily, to heckle the banker he entrusted unwisely with savings.

They are fellow commuters and every morning Driscoll circles him hawk-like with jeering epithets. It's the best free act on the commuting circuit.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

What do you get out of life? Loneliness . . . disappointment . . . ugliness? And you blame the other fellow for it, don't you?

But is it really the other fellow's fault? Or does the blame lie nearer home? Listen — yes, it's a true story.

Two young men faced a windstorm night.

One, venturing reluctantly into its tumult, turned up his collar — shuddered. Came a moaning . . . a shriek . . . a flare of greenish light. The man shrank back, his flesh prickling with the old childish fear of darkness. Hideous night—how he hated it! If only he were rich enough to stay inside on nights like this, send someone else to do his errands.

A wave of self-pity mingled with his fear and anger. If only he were rich! How easy life was for the rich — how cruel to the poor! He sneezed. Now fear mounted to panic. He was catching cold! The doctor had warned him against exposure . . . his sinus trouble would return . . . worse yet, pneumonia! He'd be sick . . . probably die.

Elsie Robinson

HE FOUND JOY

A block away the other young man stepped into the same night, but eagerly, as a swimmer flings himself into a joyous tide. He too felt old timidities arise . . . was chilled by the cold. But the consciousness of these things brushed his mind lightly as a dark wing, and was gone. His spirit rejected them.

He did not see the danger in the night, nor its discomfort. His spirit leaped away from the small concerns of the body—gave itself buoyantly to beauty. He was no longer a weak and shabby man, going on a tiresome errand. He was a spirit set free . . . one with the skirling wind and spindrift cloud . . . part of the passionate, gypsy heart of the night.

REWARD OF EFFORT

Beauty! Up and up it lifted him . . . and on it whirled him . . . Until, out of his ecstasy, these words were born, to be set down . . . passed along . . . to live forever—

". . . out into the wind," he wrote. "Big holes were blown into the sky; the moonlight blew about. Sometimes a high moon, liquid-brilliant, scudded across a hollow space and took cover under electric, brown-iridescent cloud-edges. Then there was a blot of cloud, and shadow. Then somewhere in the night a radiance again, like a vapor. And all the sky was teeming and tearing along, a vast disorder of flying shapes and darkness and ragged fumes of light and a great, swirling hole; then the terror of a moon running liquid-brilliant into the open for a moment, hurling the eyes before she plunged under cover of cloud again."

Simple sentences, but how they open the door to beauty! Yes—now that you read them, realize that you, too, have seen these things—those "ragged fumes of light" . . . that "high-moon, liquid-brilliant, scudding across hollow space." But you had no words, such as D. H. Lawrence had, to describe the sight. Lawrence was a genius. And the old discontent returns. If YOU had been born a genius.

But was Lawrence born a genius, able to describe beauty with immortal words? Or did Lawrence deliberately seek beauty . . . deliberately ignore all the meaner, hopeless aspects of life and set his eyes upon the shining peaks, the streaming moonlight?

In every circumstance there is the making of a heaven—or a hell. In every contact there is cause for inspiration—or despair.

Whose fault is it if YOU find only darkness and despair?

The Marry-Go-Round

-:- By Helen Rowland

Mrs. Solomon Says:

Behold, my Daughter, how temperate is a man in all things, save gold and politics. Yeah, his nonchalance is MOST irritating.

But woman is the great extremist. And whatsoever she startath, she never stoppeth halfway. She knoweth no middle course.

When woman first began shortening her skirts, she was not content until they reached her knees. Yet, when she turned back and began to lengthen them again, she did not stop until they swept the floor and trailed two feet behind her.

Thus, my daughter, is the way of a woman, who thinketh herself in love with a man, more tempestuous than wise. For, one moment, she smothered him with affection and is TOO kind.

But when her heart turneth against him, she is one with the elephant, who never forgetteth. Her tongue lasheth him without mercy, and not one of his sins doth she fail to flaunt in his face.

But a man is intense in nothing; and moderation is his middle name. His love, however deep, is seldom delirious. And coolness or boredom is all the emotion that he feeleth, when love is done.

For, only in politics doth he lose his head and wax violent or impetuous. Only over a golf game or a political candidate can he work himself into an emotional flame of enthusiasm.

Thus is a woman's tongue broken against her; for she CANNOT make him "suffer." Verily he is EXASPERATING. Selah.
